

Accessible Pedestrian Signals Program Status Report

December 2017

Program Overview

The New York City Department of Transportation (NYC DOT) installs Accessible Pedestrian Signals (APSs) to assist pedestrians who are blind or have low vision in crossing the street. These devices provide information in non-visual formats, such as audible tones, speech messages, and vibrating surfaces, to alert vision-impaired pedestrians when the "walk" phase is available at a given intersection.

As of December 31, 2017, there are APS units installed at 288 intersections citywide. A list of these locations is included in this report and is available on NYC DOT's website at www.nyc.gov/dot.

As was required by NYC Administrative Code Section 19-188 of 2012, NYC DOT was installing APS units at each corner of 25 additional intersections each year. Starting January 1, 2016, the new Local Law is requiring NYCDOT to install APS units at each corner of 75 additional intersections each year. The agency works closely with the Mayor's Office for People with Disabilities (MOPD) and the visually impaired community, such as the group Pedestrians for Accessible and Safe Streets (PASS), to identify intersections which present a crossing difficulty for persons with visual impairments, such as intersections with Leading Pedestrian Intervals (LPI), delayed turns (split LPI) and Exclusive Pedestrian Phases (EPP) such as Barnes Dance and mid-block locations. NYC DOT is also guided by the Americans with Disabilities Act Accessibility Guidelines (ADAAG) to consider APS units for new traffic signal installations and alterations, and considers locations that are recommended by constituents and elected officials.

NYC DOT establishes a ranked priority list of intersections for the installation of APSs based on established criteria, including but not limited to off-peak traffic presence, current traffic-signal patterns and the complexity of the intersection's geometry, including crossing distance. These criteria are set forth by the National Cooperative Highway Research Program (NCHRP) and the most recent version of the federal Manual on Uniform Traffic Control Devices (MUTCD). Final scores are based on the individual crosswalk and intersection scores for each location, and ultimately determine priority for installation. This report includes the list of the one hundred (100) top-ranked intersections as of December 31, 2017.

Cost and Funding Sources

The cost per intersection averages approximately $45,665. For the 75 intersections where APS were installed over the past year, the total cost was approximately $3,424,875.

The baseline estimated cost to furnish and install an APS unit on an existing pole is approximately $1,100. A typical quadrant intersection would require eight units, meaning that the estimated cost per intersection is at least $8,800. In many instances, an intersection may require additional work that increases the cost of the installation. For example, most intersections do not have pedestrian signal poles at the location required for APS installation (i.e., adjacent to a pedestrian ramp) requiring the construction of new poles at additional cost. Other factors, such as utilities located underneath the intersection, fire alarm posts to be relocated, protected street segments or intersections that have been resurfaced or reconstructed within the last five years, and distinctive sidewalk material may add to the total cost of installation. Overall, the costs for each intersection varies depending on the number of additional poles needed, geometry and complexity of the intersection.

Funding for the installation of APS devices comes from NYC DOT's contracts to furnish and install APS in the City of New York, which are City funded.

Recommendations for Improvements and Availability of New Technology

NYC DOT is continuously researching new technologies and instituting updates to enhance the APS program. The agency in recent years replaced the last remaining older types of APSs, which provided "birdcalls" from overhead speakers mounted on the pedestrian signal to alert visually impaired pedestrians when it is safe to cross. These older devices were louder, emitted a noise with every walk display regardless of pedestrian demand, and used a different bird call for each crossing, which confused the user. In addition, the older devices did not provide crossing information as new types of APS units do.

The new type of APS unit used by NYC DOT was tested and approved for use in New York City in 2011, and features a distinct rapid ticking tone that can be adjusted based on the needs of a specific intersection. They also feature a raised vibrating tactile arrow at the pedestrian pushbutton location, which a user can find by a locator tone. These units are installed in close proximity to each pedestrian crossing ramp so that there is no confusion which APS unit is for which crossing. Upon pushing the button, the arrow will vibrate and there will be a rapid percussive tone or audible message when the "walk" signal is displayed.

NYC DOT is constantly evaluating new technologies for use in the APS program. We currently have a contract with the University Transportation Research Center (UTRC). This multi-year UTRC contract provides NYCDOT ongoing research and development programs pertaining to urban Intelligent Transportation Systems (ITS) deployment. One of the tasks under this contract is to research "Pedestrians and Cyclists Safety Using ITS Technologies in NYC". The purpose of this task is to gather knowledge about all new and innovative technologies and methodologies and determine the most useful countermeasures that could be used in NYC to reduce pedestrian/cyclist injuries, conflicts, crashes and fatalities to meet the goals of the Mayor's "Vision Zero" Action Plan.

One feature currently being investigated under this initiative is to increase the functionality of the current APS units by the visually impaired community through the use of tactile maps affixed to the existing units. Using various textures and symbols, the maps would provide the user with valuable information before crossing the street, including their orientation at the intersection, how many lanes of traffic they will be crossing and identify all obstacles within the crosswalk (i.e., medians, bike lanes, etc.). NYCDOT is planning to work with visually impaired focus groups to test and provide feedback on the effectiveness of these maps.

Alternative technologies, such as smartphone-based applications associated with APS units will also be investigated. Research will be conducted to determine the latest and most innovative technologies currently being implemented nationally and internationally and under what conditions these new technologies are most beneficial for New York City.

The final outcome of this task will be a report providing a method to objectively look at each potential measure and come up with a recommendation to decide under what conditions each countermeasure should be used. NYC DOT will continue to evaluate the potential uses of new technologies on the market to assist blind and low vision individuals in navigating the city's roadways.

Some recommendations for enhancing NYC DOT's APS program include, but are not limited to:

- Continued evaluation of the structure of the APS program for possible improvements to staffing and funding levels and sources.
- Further research of new technologies to enhance the APS program.
- Continued dialogue with blind and low vision advocacy groups.
- Participation in any future USDOT Vehicle-to-Infrastructure testing opportunities that will offer positioning and computing capabilities to a traveler and the ability to interact with infrastructure, utilizing systems that communicate with roadside equipment using many tools, including dedicated short range communications (DSRC), 3G, 4G, Wi-Fi and Bluetooth.
