The first conclusion drawn from this extended comparison of experience in nine successive years is that high temperature in this city, when it has continued a few days, is attended by an excessive mortality among children under two years of age, and whenever such intemperature is conjoined with excessive moisture of the atmosphere, the mortality reaches its maximum. The other factors which enter into the general cause of this excessive infant mortality in the various sections of the city and in certain classes of the population are various, but not difficult to understand. The slums of poverty and debased ignorance and the accumulated evils which overcrowding and tenementhouse life imply, present ample causes for all the suddenness and excess of mortality which are recorded in the same history of deaths and of the physical wrongs that cause them.

The present is obviously one of the most healthful summers New York has enjoyed in many years. The death rate which was at 43.05 in the 1,000 last week, fell to 38.05 per 1,000.

Respectfully submitted,

CITY OF NEW YORK, DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE, July 30, 1874.

Hon. CHARLES F. CHANDLER, President of the Health Department.

SIR-I have received your communication of the 25th instant, transmitting copies of a report of a Sanitary Inspector, relative to the condition of Worth street, and the adjacent streets of the Five Points, and a letter of the Department of Public Works, dated the 21st instant, stating that a proposal for regulating, grading, and paving said streets had been sent to this Department on the 25th of June, for approval of sureties, but that no information as to any action upon it had then been received.

then been received.

The proposal was returned on the 22d instant, to the Department of Public Works, without my approval, because the sureties, although the contractor was duly notified to produce them, failed to appear and justify. The contractor had previously asked by letter, addressed to this Department, for an extension of some days, to enable him to obtain the attendance of his sureties, one of whom was said to be ill, and ample time was given him to perfect his proposal in respect to sureties.

sureties.

The sureties not appearing in due time, he was notified, under date of the 16th instant, that if they did not attend at this office on or before noon of Saturday, the 18th instant, I should take action upon his proposal.

The contractor thereupon asked that the time for producing the sureties be extended until the 21st instant, when he promised he would have them in attendance, or substitute other parties in their stead.

Upon the failure of the sureties to appear to

Upon the failure of the sureties to appear to qualify on the 21st instant, the proposal was returned to the Department of Public Works, on the following day, without my approval.

The delay therefore occurred which was not necessary in the transaction of this class of public business, and this Department has from the beginning made every effort to facilitate the execution of the contract.

This statement of the facts in the case seems needed in this letter, because the communication of the Department of Public Works of the 21st inst., informing you that it had not received information from this Department, was published in the daily press on the 25th inst., three days after it had received the information.

Bids have been again invited for this work which will be opened on the 6th prox.

Respectfully,

ANDREW H. GREEN,

ANDREW H. GREEN, Comptroller.
