Notable Fires.

April 19—Fifty-ninth street and Twelfth avenue, a five-story brick building, one hundred and fifty by two hundred feet, divided by a wall through the centre. The front (or Fifty-ninth street) half was occupied as a lard refinery and rendering establishment, and the rear as a storehouse for general merchandise. The Chief of Department made a special report of the operations at this fire to the following effect : The fire originated in the lard refinery, and owing to the nature of the contents, and to the greasy condition of the building itself, resulting from the business carried on therein, the fire spread with great rapidity; in fact the entire structure was on fire before the arrival of the force in response to the first alarm, received by the Department at 3.40½ o'clock P. M. from fire-alarm box No.

571. The first company (Engine 23), located at Fifty-eighth street, near Broadway, reached the The first company (Engine 23), located at Fifty-eighth street, near Broadway, reached the scene of the fire in about three minutes after the alarm, and its commanding officer at once sent out a third alarm, which was succeeded by special calls at various times for six engine companies. The fire-boat "Havemeyer," the police-boat "Patrol," the Charities and Correction boat "Thomas S. Brennan," as well as a number of railway company tugs known to be provided with fire-pumps were summoned. The building in which the fire originated stood at the only entrance to the grounds occupied by the New York Central Railroad Company, extending from Fifty-ninth to Seventieth street, and from Eleventh avenue to the river, a width of one thousand feet. Within these limits were two immense grain elevators, designated as A and B, and four covered piers, two stories high, about one hundred by five hundred feet in area, used for freight storehouses. There were also coal shead pockets, stock yard cattle-nens, a large round-house for locomotives, and a nier about one hundred by hve hundred teet in area, used for freight storehouses. There were also coal sheds, trestles and pockets, stock yard cattle-pens, a large round-house for locomotives, and a pier at the foot of Fifty-ninth street. The entire area is supplied with water by a six-inch pipe, having attached to it eight hydrants, used for all purposes, but supposed to furnish a sufficient supply for fire protection. In fact, however, one engine will exhaust about all the water that the pipe can furnish. There were three fire engines within the inclosure, one of which was attached to a hydrant while two used their suctions at the bulkhead. Elevator A was three hundred and fifty-four feet long, one hundred feet wide and one hundred and tifty feet high. Elevator B was three hundred and twenty-six feet long, seventy-six feet wide, and one hundred and thirty-one feet high, and, both together, contained at the time one hundred and thirteen thousand bushels of grain. The wind was blowing from the southeast and carried the intense heat from the burning lard and, both together, contained at the time one hundred and third one fundred and thirdy-one feel high, The wind was blowing from the southeast and carried the intense heat from the burning lard building in the direction of the Fifty-ninth street cattle pier and elevator A, which latter soon took fire at the peak of the roof where it was impossible to reach it. The heat from the fire in this building, in like manner, communicated to elevetor B, and from elevator B to the storehouse on pier D. At this point a stubborn fight was made by the fire extinguishing force, but, as it was exposed for its entire length on the south to the fire raging in elevator B, it was communicated to the under part of the pier and compelled the temporary retirement of the firemen therefrom. The force was then concentrated on the next pier and, after a very desperate struggle, it was checked at that point by the force there engaged, consisting of three land engines, the fire-boat "Havemeyer," and the chartered boat "John Fuller," the Brooklyn Fire Department boat "Seth Low," and six or eight tugs. The Police boat "Patrol" did not respond to the call, and it is understood that it was out of service undergoing repairs. The Charities and Correction steamer "Thomas S. Brennan," was seen in the vicinity of the fire, but did not engage in the work of extinguishment, presumably because of its large wooden upper works which renders it useless for fire service. The fire was under control in about six hours from the time of its origin. During the fire the fire-boat " Havemeyer" (Engine 43), stopped work for want of steam, and the me in charge could not explain the reason, except that in adding fresh fuel the steam pressure suddenly dropped and it required some time to regain it. On the south and easterly sides, and where the fire origin-ated at the Fifty-ninth street end, there were eleven engine companies at work, which prevented the and it required some time to regain it. On the south and easterly sides, and where the life origin-ated at the Fifty-ninth street end, there were eleven engine companies at work, which prevented the fire from spreading in those directions. The fire-boat "Zophar Mills" (Engine 51), the most powerful fire-boat, was necessarily out of service undergoing repairs which had been ordered by the United States government inspectors. It is upon record that to provide for just such emergencies, the Board of Estimate and Appor-

United States government inspectors. It is upon record that to provide for just such emergencies, the Board of Estimate and Appor-tionment has, for the last three years, been asked for an appropriation to build an additional boat, the necessity for which had been clearly and emphatically stated. These demands were, however, disregarded, and no appropriation was made for the purpose until last December, thus necessitating the postponement of repars to both the "Mills" and "Havemeyer," and delaying the preparations for building the new boat until the present time. The Department had to contend with many im-pediments in combating this fire. The buildings on fire were about one thousand feet from the fire hydrants, and very long lines of hose were therefore required to reach it, thus materially diminishing the supply of water at the pipes. The fact that none of the streets above Fifty-ninth street extend beyond Eleventh avenue, and that the entire space from there to the river was covered with cattle pens, railroad tracks and freight cars, made it impossible to use the force to advantage on the south side of the fire except as above stated, at Fifty-ninth street. If it had been possible to use more companies at the northern end of the fire, they would have been called ; but as it was recognized that they would be of no service, it was not deemed proper to uncover more of the city, especially as another fire was burning in the lower part of the city, for which a second alarm had been sent at the time. The successful checking of the fire at the northern end was due mainly to the fire-boats which were nevertheless compelled to abandon their positions several times because of the intenses heat and smoke. The suggestion was made by the Chief of Department that, in the event of application to rebuild the burned structures, permission be withheld until bridges are built over the inclosures from Eleventh avenue to the river whereon water-pipes could be laid and hydrants thus be located in the vicinit

Upon this report the President made the following indorsement : "From what I saw on the night of the fire and from a careful inspection of the burned district, "From what I saw on the night of the fire and from a careful inspection of the burned district, since made, I am of the opinion that the forces of this Department were handled by Chief Shay with excellent judgment and to the very best advantage. The situation was such that the extin-guishment of the conflagration had to depend almost entirely upon our fire-boats. By reason of the non-action of former Boards of Apportionment this Department has been forced to keep both fire-boats in service much longer than it would otherwise have done. One of these boats was, at the time of the fire, necessarily out of service and was replaced by a hired boat, the best that could be obtained, but much inferior to the "Zophar Mills" in power, while the other boat had been just returned from the repair yard, and, being partly new, did not act under the great strain as well as was expected.

was expected. "If the repeated and urgent requests of the Department, dating back to 1886, for an appro-priation for an additional floating engine had been heeded when made, the amount of such appropri-ation would have been saved at this fire many times over in the decrease of loss, which would printon for an additional notating engine had been heeded when hade, the almount of such appropri-ation would have been saved at this fire many times over in the decrease of loss, which would undoubtedly have been the result. "In accordance with the recommendation of the Chief of Department, directions should be given to the Superintendent of Brildings to immediately notify the Board of Fire Commissioners, upon receipt of any proposition to rebuild within the burned district the structures which formerly stood there, in order that, as a conditional precedent to such rebuilding, the Commissioners may impose conditions calcuated to make the premises easily accessible to the land forces of the Department." The cause of the fire was not ascertained and the estimated loss was $2,046,557. June 14.—No. 33 Norfolk street, a six-story brick tenement building, twenty-five by eighty feet, occupied by twenty-two families, the fire originated on the second floor and the first alarm therefor was received at 6.20 P. M. The first company (Engine 17), arrived in about two minutes after the alarm was received and found the fire extending up the stairway and over all the apartments to the roof. The building was provided with fire-escapes on both front and rear ; but notwithstanding this, the bodies of a woman (Mrs. Kelickman), aged 70, and a child (Esther Goldberg), aged 2, were found on the third floor after the fire was extinguished, having undoubtedly been overcome by the smoke and heat while endeavoring to escape before the arrival of the force. There was evidently a great delay in sending out the alarm, as Hook and Ladder 18, located in Attorney street, near Delancey, had received a verbal alarm and were preparing to respond when the telegraphic alarm was received, while the Chief of the Fourth Battalion reports that upon his arrival, but four minutes after the alarm, he found that the fire had extended throughout the entire building, from the second story to the roof. Subsequently second and third alarms wer and four hook and ladder companies were required to extinguish the fire, and it was under control in about one hour. Three engine companies reported no water pressure on the hydrants used by them, and the reports of all the companies showed a very deficient supply of water. The services of one of the companies were rendered entirely useless because of its failure to obtain water. The fire was caused by a berosene oil store taking fire and resulted in an estimated loss of estimated. caused by a kerosene-oil stove taking fire, and resulted in an estimated loss of $8,950.
