The 972 deaths represent a death-rate of 29.70, against 29.63 for the previous week and 23.42 for the corresponding week of 1891.

Contagious and infectious diseases show a slight increase, due entirely to the increased prevalence of measles, the number of cases reported of diphtheria, measles, scarlet fever and typhoid fever being respectively 121, 156, 211 and 8, against 125, 117, 224 and 13 for the previous week, a total of 496 against 479. Diphtheria increased between Division and Rivington streets, west of Norfolk street, between Fourteenth and Twenty-sixth streets, West, between Fortieth and Eighty-sixth streets, East, and in the lower part of the annexed district, decreasing, as a rule, elsewhere. The increase of measles was most marked between Division and Fourteenth streets, west of Norfolk street, and Avenue B, between Fortieth and Eighty-sixth streets. East, and north of Eighty-sixth street, and Avenue B, between Fortieth and Eighty-sixth streets, East, and north of Eighty-sixth street. Scarlet fever increased between Houston and Fourteenth streets, west of Broadway, between Fourteenth and Twenty-sixth streets, East, between Fortieth and Eighty-sixth streets, West, above Eighty-sixth street, and in the upper part of the annexed district, the decrease being most marked between Fortieth and Eighty-sixth streets, East.
