FOR CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.
All such appropriations being made subject to the following conditions:
1. The accounts of all charitable institutions receiving public moneys shall be so kept as to show the receipts of and disbursements from public money separately from the other funds of such institutions, and all institutions shall keep an exact record, to be corrected from time to time, in a form to be approved by the Comptroller, showing the addresses of the parents, guardians or nearest relatives of inmates, and other information designed to facilitate inquiry into their financial inability to provide for such inmates.
2. Moneys received from the City Treasury shall be used by such institutions only for recurring expenses of "care, support and maintenance."
3. All institutions receiving public moneys shall be at all reasonable times open to the visitation and inspection of duly authorized representatives of the Department of Public Charities and the Department of Finance.
4. Upon it appearing to the satisfaction of the Comptroller that it would be to the public interests to withhold payments to any charitable institution for which an appropriation has been made, he shall give written notice to such institution of his intention to apply to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment for authority to so withhold such payments, and upon the determination of said Board that such payments should terminate, the right of any such institution to receive payment for services rendered thereafter shall thereupon cease.
5. Except where appropriations are made in bulk and not upon a per capita basis, no payment shall be made for inmates of private charitable institutions unless the same shall have been accepted by the proper Commissioner of the Department of Public Charities as a proper charge against the City, and, except in emergency cases, Commissioner of Charities shall not accept as proper charges against the City inmates capable of paying for their own support, or for whose care adequate provision can be made in public institutions. The City shall not become liable for any payment to a charitable institution in excess of the appropriation which may have been made to such institution, notwithstanding any per capita rates of payment that may have been fixed for the inmates thereof.
6. All institutions receiving money from the City are required to state specifically the amount so received, as from the City Treasury, in their printed annual reports.
7. "That no money be paid to any private charitable institution which pays any salary to or gives any consideration, financial or of any kind, for services to, or that has any business dealing with, or secures goods or merchandise, directly or indirectly, from any officer or trustee or member of its Board of Managers."
8. The rates of payments to private charitable institutions, unless otherwise specially provided for, are fixed for the various classes of inmates as follows:
For infants under two (2) years of age, and in infants' hospitals also between the ages of two and five, per day.....	$0 38
For dependent children from two (2) to sixteen (16) years of age, per week.....	2 00
For delinquent children, per annum.....	110 00
For adult inmates of Reformatories, committed by the Courts, per annum.....	110 00
For inmates in homes for fallen and friendless women, per annum.....	110 00
*For maternity cases, per case.....	18 00
*For homeless mothers, nursing infants, per month.....	12 00
To hospitals for medical treatment, per day.....	60
To hospitals for surgical treatment, per day.....	80
* Institutions shall be paid $18 for the care of the mother and child during fifteen days of her confinement, and for every day thereafter shall be paid at the rate of 38 cents per day for the support of the child, and also $12 per month for the maintenance of the mother, if she remain in the institution nursing her own infant after the expiration of the fifteen days.
That charitable institutions for children now carried in the Budget and not sending their inmates to the Public Schools, and not sharing in the Corporate School Fund, and not receiving Teachers and school supplies from the Board of Education, but giving in their own buildings secular education to the children resident in the institutions, shall be paid a per capita of 33 cents per week for each child receiving such instruction of four years of age and over during ten months in the year. This money to be paid under the authorization of section 230 of the Charter, but under the general conditions relating to institutions receiving Corporate School money, as provided in section 1154.

The City of New York, President of the Borough of The Bronx, October 13, 1903.

"A petition having been presented to the President of the Borough of The Bronx, signed by C. H. Stonebridge and six others, to lay out two small parks at the intersection of East One Hundred and Eighty-fourth street and Arthur avenue, and at the intersection of East One Hundred and Eighty-fourth street and Third avenue, I beg to state that in accordance with the submitted sketches, said parks fall on areas which have been acquired by the City for street purposes.

"The street intersection at East One Hundred and Eighty-fourth street and Third avenue is not large enough to inclose a space for a public park, and the area at the intersection of East One Hundred and Eighty-fourth street and Arthur avenue, which is more spacious, can scarcely be considered large enough for a public park, without congesting the traffic.

"I recommend therefore that no action be taken in this matter.

"Respectfully,

"F. GREIFFENBERG, Principal Assistant Topographical Engineer.

Submission No. 155.

Submission No. 156.

Committee on Delancey Street Public Comfort Station.

The Committee on Quarters and Staff submitted the following report:

"Your Committee on Quarters and Staff, to which was referred, at last meeting of the Commission, the matter of itemized budget for 1904, reports progress in that, up to date, items of similar amount and for similar purposes to those similarly reported a year since are the nearest approximation it can now suggest for those of the year to come.

"The Board of Estimate and Apportionment having so rearranged its calendar as to have unexpectedly called for hearing on Art Commission estimates for coming year at one of the earlier instead of later dates, at which it considers such matters—on Wednesday last—by direction of the Committee, the Assistant Secretary appeared, and submitted as our only present suggestion that the appropriation of $8,600 for 1903 be renewed for 1904; which, we are assured, will be done—without limitation as to items—thus leaving the Commission free to use the total amount as it finds needed, subject only as to employees, to compliance with Civil Service Rules.

"We question whether more definite settlement of items should be attempted before the probable scope of our duties during 1904 is more definitely fixed—as can only be determined after conference with the Mayor.

"The sum mentioned, however, will suffice, unless the amount and scope of our work should exceed even that which late submissions would suggest.

"The extent to which officials, Architects and others interested in City work have utilized our scant library suggests, indeed, a larger expenditure, to procure and preserve illustrated and other data on civic art than thus provided for. But even our present quarters are too limited for convenient preservation and use of much more than we can probably secure within our appropriation, especially since (from the lateness at which these quarters were ready) we shall return to the City Treasury above one thousand (1,000) dollars of our current appropriation, unless between now and the end of the year it can be economically expended in facilities which, only from now on, we are able to use."

The report was received and placed on file.

The Committee on Rules for the Withdrawal of Books, by members of the Commission, from Commission's Library, recommended that the following practice be adopted:

"As to books, prints, etc.—not being any portion of the records or official files of the Commission—on depositing with the Secretary a receipt therefor, any Commissioner may, at any time, withdraw not more than two volumes, or items, for perusal or examination in his personal custody, these to be returned within two weeks, or before the next ensuing meeting of the Commission, if such meeting is more than two weeks distant, and before other volumes, or items, shall be similarly taken by him."

On motion, the recommendation of the Committee was approved.

The Committee was thereupon discharged.

On motion the Chair appointed the following Committee upon Catalogue of Works of Art belonging to the City: Commissioners Marshall, chairman; Healy and Farragut.

The following suggestion from Messrs. Wilkinson & Magonigle, architects, relative to the design for the main entrance of the Gates Avenue Court House, Brooklyn, was presented:

"The specifications call for a full size model of this doorway, and we would respectfully suggest that as such a model would be by far the most satisfactory way to reach a judgment upon the actual effect of the composition, your body take such action as to permit us to proceed with the rest of the work, advertise for bids, etc., etc., and when the model is completed, submit it for approval."

On motion the Assistant Secretary was directed to notify Messrs. Wilkinson & Magonigle that the Art Commission had no jurisdiction in the premises except to pass upon the submission to be made, and consequently that the matter was one upon which the Commission could take no present action.

In the absence of the Secretary, the President presented the report of the Assistant Secretary on civic art in the cities of Northern Europe, lately visited by him, by direction of the Commission, which read as follows:

City Hall, New York City, October 12, 1903.

The cities visited were Copenhagen, Stockholm, Helsingfors, St. Petersburg, Moscow, Warsaw, Budapest, Vienna, Dresden, Berlin, Hamburg, Altona, Cologne, Brussels, Antwerp and Paris. Several days were spent also at the Dresden Municipal Exhibition. Maps, plans, prints, photographs, books and pamphlets relating to city embellishment in its many phases were secured from each city, which form as complete and as comprehensive a collection as exists upon this side of the Atlantic. When classified and thoroughly indexed, it should be of great usefulness, not only to City officials, but to artists, architects and private individuals interested in city embellishment. The work of collecting the material and data was greatly simplified by the generous courtesy of Secretary Hay, who placed the Consular service at my disposal, and of his Honor, Mayor Low, who secured the co-operation of foreign city officials.

The experience of European cities upon many essential features is a unit. It uniformly condemns, for example, the haphazard location of public buildings in narrow by-streets, and it uniformly approves the erection of monuments and fountains at the intersection of prominent thoroughfares. But every European city has not been equally successful in the selection of locations for its public buildings and monuments, in the arrangement and embellishment of its parks and open spaces, or in any of the many directions that public art has expression. Usually some one city has excelled all others in certain phases, and more attention will be given in this report to these pre-eminently successful instances than to others which are simply satisfactory and worthy of hearty commendation.

Foreign Cities at a Disadvantage.

In some respects the cities of Europe have been at a disadvantage. City building (Stadttebau) has undergone revolutionary changes in the last half century. Comprehensive systems of sewerage, lighting, water supply, transportation, etc., scarcely antedate 1850. Streets, once sufficiently wide for the ebb and flow of traffic, are too congested now, and conditions which were once assumed to be good enough are not now tolerated. The sordid ugliness, formerly accepted as the inevitable attendant upon certain phases of city life, is now generally condemned, and steps are everywhere being taken to infuse beauty even into the most congested and forbidding quarters of our cities. To meet these new requirements is evidently much more difficult for an old city, with an established ground plan inherited from the antiquated past, than for a young city which may draft its street plan and formulate de novo its building regulations.

Such was the disadvantageous position of almost all European cities when the movement for civic betterment started. The centre of urban life originally was the castle, the church, the marketplace or the palace, and around these a town grew without thought or plan. The necessity for fortifying the town and the consequently high value of land within the city walls compelled the utilization of every nook and corner, and as the town grew in population, congestion and filth outran all else. When the necessity for dealing with these conditions became apparent the situation was a most difficult one with which to deal. Not only was it imperative to condemn and reconstruct individual buildings, but the street plan of the city had often to be rearranged, new thoroughfares to be cut through crowded quarters, old streets widened and tortuous windings straightened. This work had to be done first, for no comprehensive scheme of beautifying the city could be projected until the ground plan had been determined. The changes in the street plans of European cities will be considered first in this report.

Reconstruction of Paris.

Probably more has been done in Paris in this direction than in any other city. The work was begun under Napoleon I., but the longest strides were taken after Baron Haussmann began his gigantic schemes involving the reconstruction of the whole city. From year to year the work has been continued. New streets and avenues are constantly being opened, every quarter has or has had its improvement scheme, and the foreigner who visits Paris only occasionally finds a new city at each visitation. Millions of francs are spent annually to let light and air into congested neighborhoods, to improve transportation facilities and to create boulevards and open spaces. As a result, Paris has a finer system of boulevards than any other European city, and its world-renowned beauty is largely due to these spacious tree-lined avenues, parks and open spaces that are being multiplied and made more beautiful from year to year.

One of the most admirable features of this work is the systematic and regular way in which it is carried forward. Plans are drawn and adopted far in advance. As fast as funds are provided and the property can be acquired at a reasonable figure, the scheme is pushed along, not spasmodically, but steadily, systematically and keeping pace with the growing needs of the city. It will be at least ten years before the plans now adopted on paper will actually be carried out, and long before these are completed others will have been prepared for still further improvements.

Value of a Comprehensive Scheme.

The advantage of laying out the street plan in advance of population may also be illustrated by reference to a Brussels suburb. The city officials, noting the steady growth of the town, perceived that in a few years houses would be springing up in this new locality. Recalling the bad effects of haphazard expansion and the great expense of rearranging streets after a district is built up, they attacked the problem in advance, with most excellent results. A beautiful park was laid out with trees, fountains, statuary and floral displays. Diagonal streets with pleasing vistas were provided. Streets of generous width and well adapted to rapid transportation followed. Focal points were emphasized by grass plots with sites for monuments or statues. Trees were planted along many of the less important streets as well as the boulevards. A new suburb was thus planned from its inception with comparatively little expense and no inconvenience to the public.

The wisdom of adopting a general scheme which may be modified in detail as occasion requires, but which will be planned in its general features in advance of urban growth, executed as rapidly as possible and in harmony with which parks will be constructed, monuments erected, public buildings located and other structures provided, is evidenced by foreign experience. There is continuity and harmony in the various improvements, and the work accomplished by each generation does not need to be undone by a succeeding generation. Instead of conflict, each additional improvement adds far more than indicated by its cost, and the improvements already carried out give tone and character to the new work, which would be lacking if there were no interdependence and if they had been carried out in a haphazard way. Few European cities were so fortunate in their early history as to have a well thought-out plan, and whatever of systematic arrangement has been since introduced is of recent date.

"Ring" Boulevards.

No change has been more common than the transformation of outgrown fortifications into wide promenades or a succession of parks. Generally, one can trace the site of the old walls by this circle or series of concentric circles of boulevards. Among the most beautiful (besides those of Paris already mentioned) are those of Brussels, with their four or six rows of wide-spreading trees, grass-plots, walks, bridle paths, frequent benches for pedestrians, appropriately located fountains, monuments and statuary at commanding centres, and broad avenues running out in every direction from focal points to afford rapid communication with the suburban districts and shady walks and drives for the people living in the neighborhood; of Cologne, where the city is girded by a continuous succession of small parks, boulevards and plazas with floral displays, green sward, monuments, fountains, ivy-twined bits of the old city walls, and other adornments; of Bremen, where the configuration of the fortifications is still seen in the winding lake and the irregularity of the parks; of Hamburg, where the ring parks are very spacious, where the moats have been turned into lakes, where the irregularities of the old fortifications have been utilized to give variety and rusticity, and where many public buildings have been located either in or bordering on the parks; not to mention the less magnificent but quite successful ring boulevards in Budapest, Prague, Cracow, Leipzig, Breslau, Gotenburg, Copenhagen, Nijny-Novgorod, Moscow, and the many French cities patterned after Paris.

The grandest and most comprehensive scheme is in Vienna. Like other cities, it had in 1857 very elaborate fortifications, beyond which the city was rapidly extending, rendering them of less and less value as a protection against invasion. Soon after the accession of Francis Joseph, he ordered their removal, and out of the three-cornered fight over the disposal of the land, between the City of Vienna, the Kingdom of Austria and the Crown family itself, a very fortunate compromise was arranged. A portion of the immense area formerly given over to the walls, moats, glacis and drill-ground was to be laid out in broad, tree-lined boulevards girdling the inner city, a portion to be made into parks, a portion used as sites for public buildings, and still another portion (so vast was the area) sold to provide funds out of which to construct artistic public buildings. The whole scheme was so intelligently planned, including the treatment of the park areas and the ring-strasse, the location of the public buildings with adjoining open spaces and parks, the erection of appropriate monuments at vantage points, and the branching of other boulevards at proper places, that there is nothing of the kind in all Europe that is more imposing, more harmoniously effective, or more artistic. Although begun and in large measure completed many years ago, improvements and extensions are being made from year to year.

St. Petersburg—A Modern City.

Of all European cities of importance, St. Petersburg has probably had least need to reconstruct its street plan. This is due principally to its youth (St. Petersburg celebrated its 200th anniversary at the same time New York commemorated its 250th birthday) and to the foresight of Peter the Great and Elizabeth, who made most of the principal streets of great width and laid out many open spaces in the very first days of the city's history. By so doing they secured for the city, at little cost, what other cities, because of the lack of foresight and appreciation upon the part of their early rulers, have been compelled to purchase at great expense and inconvenience. St. Petersburg vies with Paris as regards the generous width of the streets and the expanse of open spaces.*

* Under the law a tenant who has an unexpired lease is allowed generous damages if the city takes the property he is occupying before the lease expires. Consequently, a building is often allowed to stand, although impeding the completion of the scheme, until the lease expires, by which means a considerable saving is made to the city.

Variety of Street Plans.

The street plans of European cities show the greatest variety. No two cities are exactly alike. Amsterdam and Budapest have series of streets forming concentric semi-circles with the waterfront as a diameter and another series of radiating streets. Antwerp has a similar system, but with less regularity and a larger number of small streets running in every direction. Brussels has a ring boulevard bounding the inner city, with avenues radiating not from the centre of the city but from the ring, one wide boulevard running through the business centre connecting the two principal depots, one at the south and the other at the north, and a few other boulevards connecting the smaller nerve centres of the city. Vienna, Moscow, Dresden and Leipzig resemble Brussels, except that the central portion of these cities cannot boast of such fine new boulevards as Boulevard Anspach. Karlsruhe has a system of radial streets diverging from the Schloss with almost mathematical precision, overlaid with a few rectangular streets. In Paris one finds concentric rings of boulevards, a system of avenues radiating from the Louvre and Place du Châtelet, and still others radiating from such important local centres as Place de l'Etoile, Place de la Bastille, Place de la République and Place d'Italie. Stockholm, St. Petersburg, Hamburg, Cologne, to some extent Berlin and most other cities of importance, have avenues varying in size and importance which approach a common nucleus—the business centre of the city. Stockholm possesses the rectangular system, but the axes of different sections are not parallel, so that there are many streets that make acute angles in crossing. Still other cities have such a mixture of short streets, twisting and turning, that it is impossible to find that there is any system whatever. This is true of the older cities and the older portions, but seldom of the new suburban areas or of schemes adopted in the last half century.

Principles Suggested.

Local conditions—inherited street plan, topography, the location of railroad stations and many other factors—determine which of these plans is best for any particular city, but quick transportation demands the development of civic centres with a system of avenues radiating from the business and other important local centres, and toward this end European cities are working. Such a system also adds to the attractiveness of the city, for the focal points afford good locations for public buildings and monuments. They not only create beautiful vistas, but give to public structures the dignity and grace which they lack if located in narrow streets, shut in by other buildings.

It is also a visible fact that boulevards should be so planned as to connect the parks of a city. Such parkways may be so treated as to become small parks in themselves without interfering with their use as thoroughfares. Witness Rue de la Loi connecting the Royal Park with Parc du Cinquantenaire, or Avenue Louise, Boulevard de Waterloo and Boulevard du Régent binding together the Bois de la Cambre and the Royal Park in Brussels, or the Johann Georgen Allee extending from the business centre of Dresden to the Grosse Garten, and Andrassy-strasse similarly situated in Budapest.

The water front of the city also offers an excellent location for promenades or boulevards, as instanced by the much-frequented Lange Linie along the harbor of Copenhagen, Strandvägen in Stockholm, the Franz Joseph Promenade along the Danube in Budapest, Boulevard Frère-Orban bordering the Meuse in Liège, and river streets in other cities, especially Amsterdam, where the canals are generally lined with at least one row of trees on each side.

Street Embellishment.

European experience further demonstrates that it is not vital that an avenue or boulevard be laid out in a straight line for a long distance. Indeed, there are few prominent thoroughfares that continue an unbroken line for such a long distance as does Broadway from Bowling Green to Grace Church. This is partially due to conditions which could not be remedied, such as an inherited street plan of crooked streets, and partially to the avowed intent of those who laid out the new avenues. The street that runs straight ahead for miles, approaching only a blurred and characterless horizon, is not to be compared as regards its artistic merit with the avenue which varies its course and thus permits the eye of the traveler to rest upon a column, an arch, a fountain or a facade of a public building. Imagine the Avenue de l'Opéra without the Paris Grand Opera House at its terminus, Rue Royale without the Madeleine, Avenue Victoria without the Hôtel de Ville, the Vienna Burggraben without the Parliament building, the Reichsrathsstrasse without the Votiv Kirche, the Alsterdamm, Hamburg, without the new Wilhelm I. monument and City Hall; Unter den Linden without the Brandenburg Gate, Rue de la Régence, Brussels, without the Palace of Justice at one end and the statue of Godfrey de Bouillon at the other, and hundreds of other instances from every nook and corner of Europe.

Where there is a long, straight boulevard, the most artistic results have been obtained by the erection of columns, arches, fountains and statues at frequent intervals to break the monotony of the view. The distance between these should not be great. As soon as one is out of easy view, another should rise. An instance of the artistic effect of this sort of treatment is the Avenue des Champs-Élysées and the promenade through the Jardin des Tuileries, where the monument to Gambetta, the Arc de Triomphe de Carrousel, the Obélisque de Louxor, the Arc de Triomphe de l'Etoile and several fountains at frequent intervals not only add immensely to the beauty of the avenue, but in turn are benefited by the avenue which adds to their beauty. Other well-known instances are the multiplicity of monuments, statues and fountains in the ring boulevards of Paris, Brussels, Antwerp, Cologne, Vienna, Copenhagen, Moscow and other cities, and in the focal points of the street plan of Berlin, Dresden, Budapest, St. Petersburg, etc.

The location of public structures is being given the thought and thorough attention it deserves, and the value of beautiful vistas is more and more being appreciated. If there is one thing for which one may be thankful for the jumble of streets that characterizes the older portions of European cities, it is that many vistas are thus provided.

Tree Planting.

That trees and green grass plots should be used upon all streets and avenues wherever possible is so apparent that it hardly needs mention. Nothing adds so much to the beauty of a street or so tempers the heat and glare of hot summer days as lines of widespread trees and plots of green grass with an adequate supply of benches for those who wish to rest and enjoy the changing scenes. The ample provisions made by many European cities have turned many boulevards into continuous park systems.

At frequent intervals the avenue is often widened into a rond point, a circle or a square with flowers, shrubs and statuary, which form a pleasing terminus for intersecting streets that may be too narrow to have trees of their own. Objectionable structures for the convenience of the public are hidden by clumps of bushes and trees, and trolley tracks, whose presence upon the boulevards is imperative to accommodate the traveling public, are almost hidden by lines of trees, which also furnish cool shade and make a car ride doubly pleasant. They also hide trolley poles, if overhead wires are used, and smother the noise made by the cars.

To prevent ugly breaks in the symmetry of tree-lined avenues, dead trees should promptly be removed and others of the same kind and size inserted. In some European cities there is carelessness, with most inartistic results, which contrast sharply with the harmony, symmetry and beauty of such boulevards as the Wiener-strasse in Dresden, Avenue Louise in Brussels, Avenue du Bois de Boulogne in Paris or the Prater-strasse in Vienna. Even the historic Unter den Linden is marred because of the failure to replant in harmony.

Street Fixtures.

The beauty of city streets depends not alone upon their direction, their width, their arrangement or even upon the trees, monuments and structures that border them, but also upon the character of the street fixtures which must be placed at frequent intervals, such as lamp-posts (gas and electric), street name signs, house numbers, tramway stations, public comforts, letter boxes, fire alarms, trolley poles, etc. These appear before the eye so constantly that they determine very largely the character of a street, and an otherwise attractive thoroughfare may be marred greatly by ugly fixtures. Because of their seeming unimportance, they have been the last to receive attention in the municipal art movement not only in the United States but in Europe. It was only recently that the Belgian National Society for the introduction of art in the streets—the first of its kind—was inaugurated, and instances of ugly street fixtures may still be drawn from almost every city, while it is more difficult to cite artistic examples in this direction than in almost any other.

However, where there is art feeling or a widespread appreciation of the beautiful, there art finds expression consciously or unconsciously. As one would expect, the most artistic street fixtures are generally found in France and Belgium, and the least artistic in Russia. Paris, Brussels and Copenhagen have the finest street lamps. In the last mentioned city, openwork steel construction has been utilized for electric lamp and trolley poles more effectively than elsewhere. Budapest has a few posts where flowers and foliage plants have been used to advantage. The street name signs of Paris, consisting of a blue enameled plate set at an angle with the post so as to reflect the light of the lamp and thus be legible day or night, are both artistic and useful, and the same scheme has been adopted for indicating house numbers. The tramway stations of Brussels are improving year by year, and are vastly superior to those of Paris. Vienna and Budapest have the most tasteful public comfort stations.

The Paris isles of safety are both useful and ornamental, for an artistic lamp-post is usually placed in the centre and sometimes it contains a clock as well. (The utilitarian side of this combination is worthy of mention here, for by placing the electric light in the middle of the street it lights both sides and reduces the number of street lamps to two-thirds or one-half the number necessary where the posts are placed on the walks.) Many other European cities have followed the same plan. Ornamental clocks, such as on the Jungfernstieg, Hamburg, are found in some cities, but their number is not large.

Street Advertising.

But why even those cities that have progressed farthest in civic art should tolerate the advertising kiosks, often ugly in themselves, and made still more ugly with their gaudy placards, even upon the most attractive boulevards and sometimes in the parks, is difficult to comprehend. Having spent large sums to make the boulevards and parks attractive, it seems strange that for the small return from advertising privileges the city authorities should be willing to nullify in part their own efforts to create beauty. Often the cities that have done the most to restrict private advertising signs and to eliminate "sandwich men," "banner men" and wagon bill-boards are the very ones which err most egregiously as to kiosks. Nothing can account for this except reluctance to relinquish any source of public revenue, however small.

Some cities have attempted to lessen the bad effect and indirectly to improve the character of the advertisements by making the structures themselves artistic, and some improvement is manifest in this direction. The number of kiosks could also be reduced upon the business streets even where they serve the useful purpose of news-stands and sub-postal stations. The same may be said of many of the public comfort stations in Paris, which are used as advertising boards. There is room for great improvement, and their objectionable features are very repulsive to those whose senses have not been deadened by constant familiarity.

Height of Buildings Limited.

The beauty of city streets is also greatly affected by the character of the buildings which line them. Public buildings are, of course, very few comparatively, and if private initiative is to be restrained and directed into proper channels it must be done largely through statutes and city ordinances. Probably the most common restriction, for it is practically universal, is that limiting the heights of buildings. Generally it varies with the width of the street; the greater width, the greater height permitted up to a certain maximum which may not be exceeded by anyone. The following extract from the Paris regulations, as amended last year, is representative, for while the precise ratio of street width to building height is not the same in all cities, the ratio in Paris is fairly representative:

If the road is less than 12 metres (39 feet) wide, the height of the building must not exceed the width of the street by more than 6 metres (19½ feet). On a roadway 12 metres wide, the house may therefore be 18 metres (59 feet) high, and for every additional metre in the breadth of the road a quarter of a metre (about 10 inches) may be added to the height of the house until the limit of 20 metres (nearly 66 feet) to the eaves is reached, but no building may exceed that.

These restrictions have had far reaching effect. Not only are the streets and lower stories of the buildings given abundant sunlight and air, but the skyline is made uniform. The maximum height is so low that no landlord now desires to erect a building with less height; the land is too valuable. But he cannot go beyond the limit, and consequently structures are neither squat nor towering. Aside from the slight variations due to the different styles of architecture, variations that are interesting rather than objectionable, the skyline is frequently uniform and pleasing.

Building Regulations.

Besides the restriction of building heights, there are numerous provisions in the code of every European city regulating, for instance, the width of balconies, the projection of cornices, the size of windows and the character of lamps, signs, awnings, fences, doorways, building materials, etc. Sometimes these regulations are not the same for the entire city, but vary from locality to locality. In a residential quarter, for example, the proportion of the lot which may be built upon is much smaller than in the business district. In Dresden it has gone so far that a certain kind of iron fence, so many feet high, no more, no less, must be used in certain residential quarters.

The aim of these provisions, in part, is to prevent the erection of ugly buildings and of buildings so dissimilarly located and so different in style and architecture as to mar the attractiveness of the street. Usually they are quite effective, but they do tend, if carried too far, to produce monotony rather than harmony. The striking similarity of the houses upon many of the streets of Paris is sometimes attributed to an excess of governmental restriction, but that it is not the inevitable result is proved by the beauty and lack of monotony on other streets where the same regulations are in force. Indeed, there is little in Paris which is more monotonous than the lines of brown stone houses in New York City, and certainly these were not the result of excessive municipal restriction. However, many architectural features that exist in European cities are due to legal restrictions, and not infrequently the results are beneficial rather than objectionable.

Nevertheless, there are not lacking many instances of inartistic streets. Unter den Linden suffers from the lack of harmony in architecture and skyline. An old building of two or three stories frequently stands next to one of six or seven. Blank walls, sometimes with obtrusive advertisements, appear at frequent intervals. Characterless facades elbow those most pleasing. Yet this street is the centre of Berlin, and held by the Germans in almost sacred reverence. To remedy these defects, there is now a law which requires that every structure built upon Unter den Linden shall previously be approved by the Kaiser, this provision being supplementary to the multitudinous restrictions of the building code. As yet the Kaiser's veto has not improved the street, for the old buildings are being replaced only very slowly.

Indirect Methods.

The tardy reconstruction of city property everywhere hinders artistic achievement. Old buildings will be maintained by unprogressive landlords, even long after it would pay to tear them down and build anew. The injurious effect of these dilapidated or inartistic structures is very much greater than their relative size. Some European cities have tried to encourage early rebuilding by exempting all new buildings from certain taxes for a specified period—e. g., five years. The saving thus made is often sufficient to induce the landlord to rebuild a number of years before he otherwise would.

Among the many ways of indirectly improving the beauty of the streets, there is one more which deserves more than mere mention, viz., the award of prizes to the owners of the more artistic facades upon new streets. More has been done in Brussels and Paris in this direction, I believe, than elsewhere. When a new street is opened, the city authorities announce prizes for the most artistic facades, the competition not to be completed until the whole street has been lined with buildings. The prizes are usually so considerable (often $4,000, $2,500 and $1,500 in Brussels, and one-half of the street tax and medals in Paris) that they arouse a lively competition among house-owners and architects. The general opinion is that the expenditure is fully warranted by the results obtained.

* The creation of such large blocks makes interior courtways necessary to afford light and air. Here one finds what very closely resembles our "rear tenement," with no direct access to the street,—a hospitable retreat for the dirty and criminal classes. In many cases these interior courts are utilized as gardens, which are very attractive and refreshing.

Similar competitions have been held for artistic advertising signs. The immediate results of this experiment have not been so encouraging, but attention has been called to the value and importance of beautiful store signs, and in Brussels particularly, on Rue de la Madeleine, a number of artistic signs may be seen.

Floral Decoration.

Municipal effort towards street adornment is occasionally supplemented by organized individual action, although as a rule the number of private societies in Europe that are laboring for city improvement is much less than in the United States. One of the most interesting schemes is that of floral decoration, which has been carried further in Dresden than in any other city visited. It was started by an organization of private individuals, who not only bewailed the unattractiveness of the city streets, but who were determined to do something. After much labor incident to experimenting with all sorts of flowers, plants, vines, small shrubs, window boxes, etc., the society made recommendations, agitated for the adoption of its plan and started to put it into operation. The plan was to induce every holder and tenant in the city to decorate his yards, buildings and window ledges with plants, vines or shrubs. City officials were besieged to set the example, and they decorated most of the city buildings. The newspapers were enlisted. Many sections of the city were personally canvassed. Prizes were awarded for the most artistic results. The movement has become so popular that even in the poorer quarters of the city, where the cost of keeping up the window boxes means something of a sacrifice, one may find whole blocks where there is hardly a window that does not have its flowers. In the well-to-do quarters the displays are often most elaborate.

The transformation of the city has been marked. Nothing so impresses one, when for the first time he steps out of the depot, and sees window after window with its bunch of geraniums, nasturtiums, begonias, vines or foliage plants. These splashes of color give a tone to a building and street that is refreshing beyond description. We are so accustomed to a total lack of color, or, more correctly, to the dull impressionless effect of city streets, that even a small bunch of green, yellow, purple or red catches our eye at once and pleases us out of all proportion to its size. What must be the effect upon those who have few opportunities to see the flowers, grass and trees of the parks, and must content themselves with the window boxes?

Color Schemes in Russian Cities.

Although Dresden far exceeds all other cities in this direction, many of them, especially in Germany and Austria, can boast of results well worthy of imitation. It remains for Russian cities, however, to show what may be done with color upon a large scale. There, the exteriors of the buildings, almost without exception, are covered with plaster. The walls are of brick—the ordinary cheap, not pressed brick—and so easily affected by the weather as to make necessary a coat of plaster to protect them. This plaster cannot withstand the weather, and every year it must be repaired and repainted. It is this annual coat of paint, applied in the summer, which offers the opportunity for the introduction of color. Ordinary whitewash is too prosaic for most Russians. Their buildings must be garbed in brighter colors.

The opportunity afforded for the production of artistic results is evident. The city might be made a Pan-American Exhibition upon an enormous scale, and instead of one color scheme, there might be an endless variety, which under proper management might rival the heavenly city of Revelations. But where there is possibility of great achievement, there is also possibility of great failure, and one can easily imagine what lurid results might be produced if bad taste and extreme individualism went hand in hand.

The actual results are varied. There are instances where either by chance, by co-operation or by governmental supervision, there is a blending of colors, a harmony of decoration, a unity of treatment that calls forth great admiration. I am inclined to the opinion that these artistic results are more often due to chance than to plan, for where opportunity is greatest, good results are apt to be lacking. For instance, the Place Dvortsovy is bordered by the Royal Winter Palace, the Ermitage, the Empirical Archives, the Ministries of Foreign Affairs and Finance, the Administration Building, the Summer Garden, the Admiralty Building and Alexander Park, which leads to another group of governmental buildings to the west. What artist with a sense of color would not jump at the opportunity of planning a scheme of decoration for these buildings! What wonderful results could be obtained! Yet last summer each building was being repainted without any apparent reference to the colors of those next to it. The Winter Palace was receiving a light chocolate coat, uniformly applied to columns, walls, cornices and statuary—the usual way. The Ermitage—the art museum—had been dressed in light buff; the Empirical Archives in white; the Ministries in dark brown; the Admiralty in light yellow, and still another building in black.

Even the Kremlin in Moscow—"the sacred city of the Czars"—showed great lack of harmony in spots. The church of St. Alexis, with its red walls, white trimmings and green roof, was quite attractive; and the Church of St. Catherine in blue and gilt was equally satisfactory. The Petit Palais in yellow and white was not so distasteful when considered alone, or even in conjunction with the Church of St. Alexis, which it neighbored on the left, but when viewed with the Church of St. Catherine on the right, the effect was inartistic.

Other instances might be cited not only of inartistic methods of decorating public buildings, but of bad results arising from the juxtaposition of buildings, pleasing in themselves but out of harmony with each other. Indeed, this is the direction in which there is most to criticize. There is little co-operation between private individuals or different departments of the government.

In Moscow, much more than in St. Petersburg, there seems to be a color sense, and not infrequently one finds a group of houses that harmonize; and where there is good taste the beauty of the street, perhaps already lined with trees, rivets one to the spot and calls forth words of warm admiration. I remember well one group on Nikolskaia, in a business centre of Moscow, which was charming, and another in Krivokolienni Pérouloek. The number of pleasing buildings, when considered without reference to those adjoining, was endless, especially in the suburban districts. The view from the top of Ivan Vélky, on the summit of the Kremlin, is beautiful and impressive. The bright colors of the buildings are toned down by distance; the trees afford ample green for the setting of the picture; the dull red tiles of the roofs add another color to the background, and the brilliant colors of the church spires and turrets give just enough life and variety to the scene.

The attempt to introduce color has not been confined to paint or whitewash. Mosaics on facades are quite common in Russian cities, and occasionally are to be found elsewhere. The subjects and artistic merit vary greatly. Sometimes they are simply decorative effects; sometimes of a semi-advertising character and sometimes representations of important events. The walls of church edifices frequently contain mosaics representing Bible scenes. In Budapest a few of the new public buildings are covered with colored glazed bricks. The new Postal Savings Bank, for example, is in light blue with gilded trimmings. The structures which cover the entrances and exits to the subway stations are built of many colored tiles.

Small Parks and Open Spaces.

In this connection, it should be noted that much of the pleasure derived from trees, shrubs and grass plots in streets, boulevards and parks comes from the refreshing green of the foliage; and the step from boulevards to parks is a very short one, for a wide boulevard with settees, trees, shrubs, grass plots, twining vines, a streamlet of water, with occasional fountains, as may be seen in Cologne, is virtually an elongated park. Indeed, it is often better than the same area in one large park. It benefits more people. It is at their very doors, and may be enjoyed morning, noon and night without a long trip to a distant park.

From the viewpoint of number and wide distribution, probably Stockholm, Dresden, Berlin and Vienna are the cities best supplied with small parks. In Vienna the ring of parks which now occupy the site of the old city walls is very beautiful, but the central portions of the city are not well supplied, especially where population is densest. The newer portions are better off, which is true of all cities, and easily accounted for by the recent origin of the park movement and the high cost of land in the older (the denser) districts.

Berlin has more small parks in the centre of the city than Vienna, but cannot boast of so effective a park ring; they are more scattered and are not bound together by boulevards. In Stockholm, also, the parks are quite well distributed.

Scandinavian cities generally control churchyards, maintaining them, keeping them open for the public, providing benches and chairs, and even erecting statuary, thus practically making small parks of them.

Moscow is fairly well supplied with small parks, and, viewing it from Ivan-Vélky, one infers that the city is thronged with small parks, so constantly do the patches of green appear among the buildings. Not all are parks, however, but more frequently small private gardens. Except in the districts given over entirely to business buildings, each house commonly has a garden with trees and flowers. These are not seen from the streets because high walls shut them in, but to the householder they serve every purpose of a small park. The chief objection is that in the poorer quarters, where they are needed most, these gardens are not common. In St. Petersburg they are still fewer in number, except in the districts inhabited by the very wealthy.

St. Petersburg and Moscow have a considerable number of large open spaces, the most important being Place Dvortsovy, Place Krasnaia and Place des Théâtres. But these are open spaces literally, they do not have a tree or a shrub, or even a bit of green grass, merely a wide stretch of level ground paved with cobblestones, over which wagons rumble with abundant noise. To be sure they give a comprehensive view of the public buildings, but such large open spaces dwarf low buildings, and if the ground were laid out with walks, drives, trees, fountains, monuments and grass plots there might still be unimpeded views of the buildings, and the parks thus constructed would be the most beautiful spots of the city. But such a treatment does not appear to have been thought of, or if broached, to have met with approval.

One of the most effective open spaces where grass, shrubs and trees have not been used is Place de la Concorde, Paris. But here their places are taken by fountains, the Obélisque de Louxor, ornamental electroliers and statues, and it is bounded upon two sides by parks. The Raadhuis-Plads in Copenhagen, the eastern end of Unter den Linden, the Dam in Amsterdam and the Place de l'Hôtel de Ville in Paris are practically vacant spaces, but necessarily so, owing to the immense traffic that flows through them, and they are not so large as to dwarf the public buildings that border them. However, where it is possible, the use of grass, flowers, trees, statuary, fountains or monuments add greatly to the beauty of an open space.

Rural Parks.

Passing to large parks, one should note the series of parks and lakes which circle the business centre of Copenhagen. Their natural beauty has been improved by numerous statues, principally the gifts of Herr Carl Jacobsen, a wealthy Copenhagen brewer, who presented the old Carlsberg brewery to the city as a permanent endowment, and of his son, who has continued the work begun by his father.

The Tiergarten of Berlin stands quite alone; it has a character all its own. For impressive solitude, for grand, majestic trees, for cool, shaded walks with no canopy but the closely interwoven branches far above, it is without a rival. In the Bois de Boulogne, Paris, there are sections where dense shrubbery and ivy-clad trees remind one of a jungle, of a southern wilderness, but the Tiergarten resembles a northern forest. Each in its way is wonderful and a source of enjoyment to millions.

Schoenbrunn, Vienna, is quite different. It represents the formal French gardening of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. The gorgeous floral displays on the parterre, the dense hedges, the precision of the walks and drives, the harmonious arrangement of fountains, monuments and sculptures attract thousands every Sunday. Other well-known instances of this style of gardening are the gardens of the Luxembourg and the Palais Royal, Paris, Swinger-Hof Gardens, Dresden, Alexander Park, St. Petersburg, and Lustgarten, Berlin. But the finest instances are, of course, the gardens at Fontainebleau and Versailles, which are so well known as not to call even for a summary of their beauties.

One might continue to enumerate park after park that possesses certain interesting features—where beauty, either natural or artificial, is a source of keen enjoyment. There is not a city in which some provision has not been made, and usually there are several parks of considerable size. The aim seems to be to supply every quarter, so that no one will be obliged to travel a long distance to reach a park, to hold the balance between large and small parks (for each class has certain advantages not possessed by the other), between rural and formal treatment, and to make all as beautiful and as attractive as possible. From the point of view of number and area the citizen of Paris can reach more in an afternoon's excursion than the citizen of any other city. At least 20,000 acres, not including the tree-lined boulevards which are parks in a sense, are open to selection.

Gardens and Playgrounds.

Mention should also be made in this connection of the botanical and zoological gardens to be found in many cities. They are frequently very artistic both as to landscape gardening and buildings. The zoological gardens in Berlin and Amsterdam are deserving of special mention. The botanical garden of Brussels is also most artistic. Located upon the side of a hill, it has utilized the advantages of its location and has combined sculpture with landscape gardening with such good effect that none excels it. Then, too, the cemeteries should be noted, for these are frequently under municipal control. The beauties of Père-Lachaise, Paris, are so well known that every tourist aims to visit it.

Not infrequently European parks appear to the stranger as poorly maintained. This is due to the fact that the public is often permitted to use the parks as recreation grounds. Shows games and amusements of all sorts are given concessions, and they are freely patronized by the large numbers who throng the parks. "Keep off the grass" is not much in evidence here. Of course such parks, or the portions of the large parks given over to the free and unrestricted use of the public, are not so beautiful as those carefully cared for, but the pleasure and benefit derived from the former are out of all proportion to the loss in art.

Successful Methods.

The methods used to beautify parks are as varied as the landscapes to be treated and as numerous as the designers. The most artistic results have been produced (1) where statuary, fountains and monuments have effectively been introduced in landscape gardening, e. g., Jardin des Tuileries, Vienna Ringstrasse, Copenhagen parks, and possibly the Sieges-Allée, Berlin; (2) where flowers, shrubs and trees have been harmoniously combined, e. g., Kungsträdgård in Stockholm, Orsted park in Budapest, Stadtpark in Vienna and Jardin des Tuileries in Paris; and (3) where natural conditions have been utilized, e. g., the lofty hill park (Brunnsparken) in Helsingfors, extending into the harbor, with its monument to the shipwrecked, the cascade park in Brussels, where a stream of water is carried by successive cascades from a fountain on the hill to a tree-bordered lake at the foot, all to be surrounded with statuary, the mountainous Blocksberg of Budapest, the river parks of Liège, Munich, Prague, Altona, Nuremberg and Rotterdam, and the island parks of Vienna, St. Petersburg and Stockholm.

Natural conditions so largely determine the effectiveness of parks that location becomes a most important factor, and often the areas having the most natural advantages are those least adapted for other purposes. Such precipitous hills as stud the old city of Ofen in Budapest could be used with difficulty as residential or business districts, but they make beautiful parks, and statuary, fountains, flowers, etc., are as effectively utilized as in the level plains of the Stadtwäldchen. Stockholm wisely dedicated long ago the rocky wilds of Djurgård to public use. Copenhagen has the romantic park of Fredericksberg-Have. Hamburg has taken advantage of the Binnen and Aussen-Alsters, in the centre of the city, and converted the shores into parks. But Antwerp has forgotten its river frontage or fails to appreciate its advantages as a site for a park.

Large rural and country parks may be located where nature offers the greatest inducement, and the principal lesson to be learned from European cities is that sites should be chosen far in advance of urban growth, as near the heart of the city as possible, and the public afforded every facility for reaching them quickly, easily and cheaply. Indeed, proper transit facilities are as important as the park itself, for it has no value unless used, and its beauty is wasted if not generally enjoyed. In this connection, one very utilitarian lesson should be learned, viz., that as the parks are for the public, restaurant facilities at moderate rates are much more important than stylish cafés with elaborate menus and expensive service.

The ideal system of small parks and playgrounds is one which supplies every district of the city, and the poorer districts best of all. Their limited area makes it impossible to depend upon natural advantages for artistic development, and resort must be had to artificial treatment. This plan has been followed everywhere in Europe, as evidenced by the many instances cited above and others that might be mentioned.

Union of Parks and Public Buildings.

In one very important respect European cities are far in advance, viz., the combination of small parks and open spaces with sites for public buildings. We are apt to stow away our public buildings among private structures, upon narrow streets and in out-of-the-way places.

European cities upon the other hand commonly locate their public buildings so as to front upon parks or open places. The attractiveness of the park is thus increased, owing to the presence of beautiful buildings, and its use as a park is not interfered with, but instead facilitated and encouraged. The park in turn adds to the beauty of the buildings, as the open area permits it to be viewed from the proper distance and with the proper perspective, which is impossible in a narrow street.

Instances could be cited from almost every city in continental Europe. Those best known are the Louvre and the Tuileries Gardens, the Grand Palais and the Petit Palais des Beaux-Arts with the surrounding gardens, and the Trocadéro, with its park sloping down to the Seine (Paris), the Prefecture and Palais des Beaux-Arts upon the Place de la République (Lille), the Royal Library in the Humlegård (Stockholm), the Art Museum, court houses, etc., in the ring parks (Hamburg), the Admiralty, the Senate, St. Synode, Ministry of War, bordering Alexander Park, the Museum to Alexander III., with parks and open spaces on all sides (St. Petersburg), Stadt-Halle in park (Mainz), the Parliament Building in the corner of the Tiergarten, the museums, the new Cathedral and the Royal Castle surrounding the Lustgarten (Berlin), and the long procession of buildings along the Ringstrasse (Vienna), beginning at the east with the industrial museums and ending at the north with the Bourse, each fronting upon a park or in a park or partially surrounded by parks. If there is any doubt as to the contribution made to civic art by such a union of park and public structure, imagine any one of the buildings just mentioned robbed of its location and snugly stowed away in a narrow street.

Open Spaces and Boulevards.

It is not always possible to have a park adjoining a public building; traffic may be too great. In such cases an open space is often provided, occupied, if at all, only by a few small structures, such as a monument, a fountain or a statue. This accomplishes the same result as produced by a park, for the public building is thereby given the dignity which should attach to public buildings and which cannot be theirs if elbowed by every tumble-down shanty or overshadowed by every towering shaft. How must of the beauty of the Palace of Justice and Hôtel de Ville in Brussels, the Parliament Building, Royal Courts and Ministry of Education in Budapest, the University, Arsenal and Imperial Bank in Berlin, city halls in such cities as Havre, Warsaw, Breslau, Dijon, Strassburg, Dresden, Paris and many other cities, and the Pantheon, the Hôtel des Invalides, Notre Dame, Ministry of Marine, and the Old Louvre in Paris is due to the open space in front of each?

In still other instances public buildings are located along wide streets, avenues or boulevards (e. g., Palace of Justice in Antwerp, and the string of buildings along Ludwigstrasse in Munich), upon the river front (e. g., University of Liege, Parliament in Budapest, and the numerous public buildings along the Neva in St. Petersburg and the Seine in Paris), upon elevations (e. g., the Kremlin, Moscow, the Palace of Justice, Brussels, and the Royal Palace in Budapest), at the termini of bridges (e. g., the Institute opposite the Pont des Arts in Paris and the Maximilianeum opposite Maximilians-Brücke in Munich), and at the termini or turning points of streets. The many advantages of this last suggestion have been discussed in preceding paragraphs.

Civic Centres.

Many cities have gone still further and have grouped several public buildings around a park or an open space or along a prominent street or boulevard, thus creating a centre of civic life and interest. In Berlin Unter den Linden and the Lustgarten form the nucleus where cluster palaces, Cathedral, museums, Arsenal, University, ministries, Opera House, fountains, monuments and statuary. In other parts of the city there are small local centres, such as the Koenigs-Platz, northeast of the Tiergarten, Leipziger-Platz and Gendarmen-Markt, with its two churches and Royal Theatre. In Dresden, the Zwinger, with all its many departments, the Royal Palace, the Princes Palace, the Court Church and the Royal Theatre, are grouped, and joined by the Brühl Terrace with another group to the west. The Kremlin, Moscow, with its numerous cathedrals, palaces, convents, Arsenal, Tribunal and Synode, has frequently been referred to. Stuttgart boasts of an effective centre with the Palace as the focus about which are located the principal buildings of Wurtemberg.

In Paris, there is first of all the Ile de la Cité, with the Palace of Justice, Sainte-Chapelle, Tribunal de Commerce, Prefecture de Police, the Hospital Hôtel Dieu and Notre Dame, with the Hôtel de Ville immediately across the Seine. The Louvre is a centre in itself, but emphasis is added by the Mairie of the First Arrondissement and the Church of St. Germain-l'Auxerrois to the east and the Palais Royal to the north. The Pantheon and the Sorbonne, with the many other schools, libraries and chapels adjoining, form a centre of education and civic patriotism in another part of the city.

In Brussels, the Grande Place, about which have stood for generations the Hôtel de Ville, Maison du Roi and the guild halls of the associations that formerly governed the city, has been restored and redecorated during the past few years. The city authorities have granted subsidies to the private owners to decorate and restore the facades in harmony with the general plan, and where the landlords could not be induced to co-operate, the city has purchased the buildings and has done the work itself. The halls date from the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, and when the plan is completed, Brussels will have one of the most interesting and artistic centres in Europe, although not so grand as those of Berlin, Paris or Vienna. Other cities in Belgium are following the example of Brussels.

Many other instances could be cited from small as well as large cities, but to Vienna must be given the palm for the most comprehensive artistic scheme. Along the Ringstrasse or about the parks which border it, are to be found nearly all of the more prominent public buildings of the city. This ring separates the Inner from the Outer City, and such excellent taste has been used in the location and planning of buildings, monuments, statuary, fountains, parks, etc., that it is the finest civic centre to be found in the world.

The artistic value of civic centres is evident. They give opportunity for a grandeur of treatment, a harmony of varying structures and an effective combination of all the arts, that is not afforded by one building or a large number of unrelated buildings scattered throughout the city. The effect, one may say, increases in geometrical ratio and arouses civic pride and patriotism to a marked degree. It only requires a little foresight, a well-considered plan, and a determination not to be swayed by interests which may wish, for selfish reasons, to secure the location of buildings elsewhere than where planned. The entire scheme does not need to be completed at the moment, but as buildings are needed and as funds are secured, the project may be pushed; only, there must be a broad comprehensive plan to follow—a goal to be reached.

Transit Facilities.

The advantages of locations near parks or open spaces and of grouping are so evident that semi-public buildings have been similarly treated, such as cathedrals (near the old market places), theatres, opera houses, banks, and especially railway stations, which need open spaces to accommodate the crowds and which, as vestibules to the city, should be so attractive as to impress the newcomer favorably the moment he sets foot within the city. Instances of effective treatment, often by the use of landscape gardening, statuary and a well arranged street plan, are found in Berlin (Lehrter Bahnhof), Paris (Gare d'Orleans), Rotterdam (central station), Antwerp (Station du Sud), Mainz, Tours, Rheims, Strassburg, Budapest, Cologne, etc. The railroads appreciate the financial advantage of attractive terminals, and frequently have improved the stations and their surroundings upon their own initiative.

Generally the railroad approach to a city is very forbidding whether viewed from the train or from the streets in the vicinity. The presence of tracks or yards usually has such a deleterious effect that the district in which they are is the most unattractive in the city. Partially to remove this ugliness and partially upon purely utilitarian grounds, there has been a strong movement for either the elevation or the depression of the tracks below the street level. The latter is considered preferable, because it removes all noise and dirt and there is no disfiguration of the streets whatever. The advent of electricity as a motive power has greatly facilitated immediate action. Copenhagen is formulating a scheme to place all tracks in the heart of the city underground, to roof over the yards, perhaps laying out a park thereon, to unite the principal stations by subways and to build a central station that shall be artistic as well as commodious. Brussels is considering a subway to connect its two important stations. Paris is extending the underground every year, ultimately to connect all of the railroad stations. Vienna, acting with the Austrian Government, put most of the Stadtbahn underground some years ago and so utilized an old branch of the Danube, which now carries very little water, for the subway that the work was accomplished with comparative ease. There are but few places where the tracks appear above ground, and the central portion of the city is thus spared the evils of a surface or an elevated road.

Where elevated roads have been built within the last few years, strenuous efforts have been put forth to make the structure and stations as artistic as possible. A comparison between the old Stadtbahn, which connects the stations of the steam railroads, and the new electric Hochbahn in Berlin shows how great has been the progress in civic art. An elevated railroad is certain to be objectionable, but the Hochbahn is a great improvement over its predecessors in Europe and America. The curved line is more generally used and ornamental fixtures have been introduced. The route follows a canal for considerable distance, and the trees which border it hide the structure and smother the noise. A few of the stations are quite artistic and add to the beauty of the parks or streets in which they are located rather than detract from it. The structures which carry the steam railroads over the streets of Hamburg are also artistic, and the stations of the underground in Vienna, Paris and Budapest are usually in good taste.

Harbor and River Improvement.

The river fronts and harbors of cities, like railroad approaches, are apt to be inartistic, to some extent necessarily so perhaps, because of the nature of the business; but that they can be made attractive has been proved by European cities. In the first place, substantial quays and buildings add very greatly to their appearance. Cologne has a stone embankment and stone quays along almost all of its river front, bordered with a tree-lined street. Budapest has a similar system, except that the street is everywhere very much higher than the quays, and that outside of the trees which line the promenade there is a street car line. The space immediately beneath the tracks and at the rear of the quay, which is 10 to 20 feet below the tracks, is used for storage purposes. This arrangement makes the river front so attractive that it is lined with fine buildings, and a number of public buildings are located there. The walls of the canals of Berlin, of the Seine in Paris, of the water front of Antwerp, of Stockholm and many other cities are built of stone or cement, and in Paris, Berlin and Amsterdam, for example, the banks have been planted with trees which add greatly to their beauty. The substantial brick warehouses upon the quays of Hamburg diminish very much the ugliness of a harbor that does not have many points of beauty.

As already noted, parks and public buildings are frequently located along rivers and harbors, and not only does the water front add to the beauty of the park and buildings, but they make the water front more attractive.

Bridges.

Where there are bridges across the river, these are, perhaps, as important factors as the quays and streets adjoining. Berlin and Paris, because of the frequency with which they have bridged the Elbe and the Seine, vie with each other for the title of "City of Bridges." All are not artistic and some are very far from it, but the beautiful Pont Alexandre III.—the latest addition to the list in Paris—represents a high standard of civic art and will set the pace for some time. Pont du Carrousel in Paris and the Schloss, Königin, Belle Alliance and Kurfürsten Brücken in Berlin, also are artistic and deserving of notice. These bridges are small as compared with those in Budapest across the Danube, where the city has built a very attractive cantilever bridge—the Franz Joseph Bridge—and a suspension bridge of beauty. Other instances might be cited from Dresden, Vienna, Amsterdam and Stockholm, the best results having been produced where sculpture has been combined with a bridge of attractive lines to produce a monumental structure.

Bridge Approaches.

The general effect is so largely determined by the character of the approaches that much attention has been paid to proper treatment at the termini. In many instances there is a large open plaza which serves the utilitarian purpose of affording opportunity for the orderly conveyance or divergence of traffic, which is impossible where the streams all centre immediately at the bridge entrance. It also gives dignity to the structure, and where the portal is monumental or emphasized by the use of sculpture, some space is necessary to give a proper setting.

The plazas at the ends of the Norrbro in Stockholm, which carries all of the immense traffic between the old city and the newer district, Norrmalm, on the mainland, the ancient Augustus Bridge across the Elbe in Dresden, the Ober-Main Bridge in Frankfurt, and the Lánčz-Híd in Budapest, show how important are the utilitarian advantages of the plan. Of course where the bridges are merely the continuation of the streets (Strassen-Brücken), and not the arteries into which flow many streams of traffic, large plazas are not necessary, but some space is always an advantage on aesthetic grounds.

Among the best instances of artistic treatment of bridge approaches are the Trocadéro Park, with its statuary, flowers and cascade at the entrance to the Pont d'Iéna, the Avenue Nicolas II., with trees and grass plots leading upon to Pont Alexandre III., on the north, and the Esplanade des Invalides as the southern approach, the Place de la Concorde north of the Pont de la Concorde, Paris; the beautiful small parks at each end of the Lánčz-Híd, Budapest, and the Square d'Avroy, with adjacent boulevards and parks, fronting the Pont de Commerce, Liege.

Budapest is building a new bridge over the Danube, and opposite the approach upon the Ofen side stands the mountainous Blocksberg. High up on the hillside a monument to St. Gellert, who suffered martyrdom here in 1046, has been erected. A few feet below this statue a stream of water will gush forth and tumbling down the rocky side, fall into a pool at street level, thus creating a beautiful vista for the thousands who will throng the bridge. At the other end, the converging point of traffic is two or three blocks from the bridge entrance. This point is emphasized by the erection of two buildings as high as the law will permit, each the reverse (in main outline) of the other. Upon the corner of each building, next to the street forming the bridge approach, there has been constructed a modest tower, but so different from the surroundings as to indicate at once that there is the beginning of the approach.

Scope of Civic Art.

Civic art concerns itself primarily with the city plan, so as to get the greatest amount of beauty from the union of the fine arts. There are a few matters, however, which might not be included under this head, and yet which pertain to it, as, for example, subjects commemorated by mural paintings for a public building. These are more properly such as belong to the history (real or mythological), life or customs of the city as distinct from other cities. A painting representing Moses in the bull-rushes may be just as fine a work of art when tested by all the canons of art as the paintings in the Pantheon commemorating the life of the patron saint of Paris, Ste. Geneviève. But from the point of view of civic art, many maintain that the former would be used to adorn a city hall with as much propriety as a painting of a bull fight to decorate a modern church. As harmony is one of the fundamental canons of art, it is argued that it should apply to subject as well as to composition, but this is not universally admitted. European cities have not universally followed this rule in the decoration of public buildings. The Paris Hôtel de Ville, generally considered one of the best decorated public buildings, has mural paintings representing hunting, botany, eloquence, philosophy, etc. These are not, it is quite generally admitted, what one would most expect to find there, nor do these receive the attention or approval by those who visit the city hall that is given to scenes from the history of Paris, or of the great men who have moulded the life of the metropolis. And, generally speaking, by far the greater majority of paintings and statuary in the municipal buildings of Europe relate to the history, life and customs of the city in which they are located, and the trend is strongly in this direction.

To cite a few instances: The City Hall of Copenhagen, now nearing completion, bears the impress throughout of Copenhagen life, and there is hardly a decorative feature in the structure that does not relate to that city alone. Its history, its industry, its commerce are commemorated, and the artists seemed to have found ample opportunity for the exercise of their ability. The same is true of the City Halls of Hamburg, Berlin, Vienna, Munich and many others. The Hôtel de Ville of Brussels has, among other things, tapestries representing the artisans whose guilds formerly ruled the city. Antwerp revels in historical paintings; there is little else.

It is hardly necessary to add, after citing instance upon instance of civic art, that the movement has a firm foothold in European cities. There is no discussion of its merits; these are taken for granted; the question was long ago settled, if it ever was mooted. Everything now centres about the question: What are the most effective methods of beautifying cities? That, too, is coming to be the situation in the United States, and rapid progress has been made within the last few years. In one direction particularly do we have the advantage. In Europe the attitude of the citizen toward the city is that of dependence. The attitude of the city toward the citizen is that of independence. But in American cities the attitude of each toward the other is that of interdependence. The highest results can only be attained by mutual co-operation, city officials with citizens and citizens with city officials. This is generally lacking in Europe. It is a most promising sign in America.

On motion, duly seconded, the report was ordered filed, and the appeal of Mr. Donovan that his record be rerated was denied.

The Secretary reported that Mr. Justice Bischoff had rendered a decision in the case of Keenan vs. Ogden, and that it had been reported in the Law Journal of October 29 as follows:

"There is no doubt that the relator, acting in good faith, was required, through the mistake of the Commissioners, to submit to a second examination, but this mistake did not give him a right to a higher rating than the law afforded him. The second examination was not a regular examination in his case for the purposes of his rating, and the nature of the examination cannot be deemed changed and so made regular upon the principles of estoppel, since the parties actually to be affected, the relator's competitors, are not the persons whose acts have led to the situation. The papers therefore present no case for a writ of mandamus, and the application is denied, but without costs."

A letter was presented from the Mayor, informing the Commission that a public hearing upon the proposed revision of the rules would be held at his office on Tuesday, November 10, 1903, at 11 a. m.

On motion, duly seconded, the Secretary was instructed to inform all the Commissioners of the hearing, and to request them to attend.

A letter was presented from Mr. George McAneny, informing the Commission that he would attend the public hearing on the proposed revision of the rules, to be held at the office of the Mayor on Tuesday, November 10, and present a letter explaining the changes made.

The Secretary reported that copies of the proposed revision of the rules had been sent to each member of the State Civil Service Commission and to the Secretary and the Chief Examiner of that body. He presented a letter from President Pound, of the State Commission, announcing a meeting of the Commission at Albany on November 20, and stating that the revision would be considered at that meeting, if officially presented by November 15.

On motion, duly seconded, the Secretary was instructed to forward a copy of the letter to the Mayor.

A letter was presented from the Board of Education, requesting the Commission to reconsider its action in declining to authorize the continuance of the services of certain Temporary Clerks beyond the period of three months.

On motion, duly seconded, the request was denied for lack of power.

A letter was presented from the Board of Education with reference to the case of Mrs. Helen Spurdle, an employee of the Brooklyn Truant School, Department of Education, whose payroll the Commission had requested the Comptroller not to pass, on the ground that her position was not one of those included in the unclassified service under section 8, chapter 370, Laws of 1899. It appeared from the communication that Mrs. Spurdle, though occasionally performing the duties of a Matron, had been appointed as a Substitute Teacher, rendered services in that capacity, and had received the regular rate of compensation for such services since February, 1903.

On motion, duly seconded, the Secretary was instructed to inform the Comptroller that no further objection would be registered to the passing of her payroll by the Finance Department.

A letter was presented from the President of the Borough of Queens, describing over his own signature the duties performed by John F. Cronin, Foreman in the Bureau of Sewers. This letter was similar to the one presented by his Secretary at the last meeting.

On motion, duly seconded, the letter was ordered filed, and the action of the Secretary in attaching the certificate of the Commission to Mr. Cronin's payroll was ratified and approved.

The reports of the Boards of Examiners for non-competitive positions in the Department of Education (Nautical School), Department of Health and Bellevue and Allied Hospitals, were approved and ordered filed.

The Commission then adjourned to meet Wednesday, November 11, 1903, at 3 p. m.

S. WILLIAM BRISCOE, Secretary.

Be it Ordained by the Board of Aldermen of The City of New York, as follows:

Section 1. The Board of Aldermen of The City of New York hereby grants to the New York and Long Island Traction Company, subject to the conditions and provisions hereinafter set forth, the franchise, right and privilege to construct and operate a double-track street surface railway, with all connections, turnouts, switches, crossovers and suitable stands necessary for the accommodation and operation of said railway, by the overhead system of electricity, or any other motive power which may be lawfully employed upon the same, in, upon and along the following named streets and highways and bridges, all situated in the boroughs of Queens and Brooklyn, City and State of New York, set forth in the following descriptions of routes:

Fourth—Beginning at a point on the Jericho turnpike at the extreme easterly boundary line of The City of New York and the Town of North Hempstead, Nassau County, New York, and running thence westerly on and along said Jericho turnpike to a point at the intersection of said Jericho turnpike and the Hempstead and Jamaica turnpike (otherwise known as Fulton street), all in the Borough of Queens.

And with the right or franchise to cross such other streets and highways and bridges (named and unnamed) as may be encountered in said routes.

Section 2. The grant of this franchise is subject to the following conditions:

First—The consent, in writing, of the owners of half in value of the property bounded on said streets and highways and bridges to the construction and operation of said railway shall be obtained by the grantee, or in the event that such consent cannot be obtained, the grantee shall obtain the favorable determination, confirmed by the Court, of three Commissioners, appointed by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, in the manner provided by the Railroad Law, before said railway is built or operated.

Second—The said right, privilege and franchise to construct and operate said railway shall be held and enjoyed by said railway company, its lessee or successors, for the term of twenty-five years from the date when this ordinance is signed by the Mayor, with the privilege of renewal of said grant for a further period of twenty-five years upon a fair revaluation of said right, privilege and franchise, but such renewal shall not provide for any further renewal. Such revaluation shall be of the right, privilege and franchise to maintain and operate said railway by itself, and shall not include any valuation derived from the ownership, operation or control of any other railroad by the grantee, its successors or assigns. It shall be made in the following manner:

One disinterested freeholder shall be chosen by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, or its successors in authority; one disinterested freeholder shall be chosen by the railway company; these two shall choose a third disinterested freeholder; and the three so chosen shall act as appraisers and shall make the revaluations aforesaid. Such appraisers shall be chosen at least six months prior to the expiration of the grant and their report shall be filed with the Comptroller, or his successor in authority within the months after they are chosen. They shall act as appraisers and not as arbitrators. They may base their judgment upon their own experience and upon such information as they may obtain by inquiries and investigations without the presence of either party. They shall have the right to examine the books of the railway company. The valuations so ascertained, fixed and determined shall be conclusive upon both parties, but shall not in any event be less than the minimum amount fixed as the sum to be paid annually for the last five years of the original franchise.

Third—Upon the termination of the said franchise, right or privilege, whether original or renewal, if the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of the City of New York, or its successors in authority, shall so desire, there shall be a fair valuation of the plant and property of the grantee necessary for traction purposes upon the said streets and highways and bridges, and of the land in private ownership upon which the said railway shall be operated or the easements of right-of-way or other necessary easements in such lands, as the case may be, including power-house equipment, tracks and appurtenances, which plant and property shall be and become the property of the City of New York at the option of the said Board of Estimate and Apportionment, or its successors in authority, on the termination of this grant and the payment to the grantee of such valuation. The valuation shall be based upon a fair appraisal of the property, excluding any value derived from the franchise, and such value shall be determined by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, or its successors in authority, provided that in the valuation of the land in private ownership, on which such railway is constructed, or the easements affecting such land, as the case may be, their value shall not be fixed at an amount in excess of the original cost thereof, to the grantee of said franchise, its successors or assigns. A sworn statement of such cost executed by such grantee and verified by the affidavit of one of its officers, shall be filed with the Comptroller of the City of New York before any act is done by the grantee, or its successors or assigns, in the construction or operation of the railway upon any route hereinbefore mentioned, which includes private property.

Fourth—The New York and Long Island Traction Company, its successors or assigns, shall pay for this franchise to the City of New York the following sums of money: During the first term of five years an annual sum which shall in no case be less than $1,000, and which shall be equal to three per cent. of its gross annual receipts derived from passenger and freight traffic, within the limits of The City of New York, if such percentage shall exceed the sum of $1,000; during the remaining twenty years of the term, an annual sum which shall not be less than $2,000, and which shall be equal to five per cent. of its gross annual receipts as above, if such percentage shall exceed the sum of $2,000.

In computing the amount of the gross receipts derived from passenger traffic and above referred to, the routes hereinbefore mentioned shall be considered, and the persons who are upon the cars of the company at any point upon such routes shall be deemed to have paid the fare provided to be paid by the ordinance granting the franchise aforesaid, whether they enter or leave the car upon such route or upon any other route upon which the grantee, or its successors or assigns, operates its cars.

Such sums shall be paid into the Treasury of the City of New York on November 1 in each year; provided, however, that the first payment shall only be for that proportion of the above sums as the time from the signing of this ordinance by the Mayor to September 30 next preceding shall bear to the whole of one year. The fiscal year shall end on September 30 next preceding said date of payment, and the provisions of the Railroad Law as it existed at the time of the adoption of this ordinance relating to the manner of payments and statements of percentages of gross receipts of street railway companies shall, as to said railway, be strictly followed. The intention of this paragraph is to fix an annual charge to be paid by the grantee, its successors or assigns, to the City of New York for the rights and franchise hereby granted, and it shall not be construed as providing for the payment by the grantee, its successors or assigns, for said franchise, of a percentage of gross receipts within the meaning of any general or special statute.

Fifth—The said annual charge or payments shall continue throughout the whole term of the franchise hereby granted, whether original or renewal, notwithstanding any clause in any statute or in the charter of any other railway company providing for payments for street railway rights or franchises at a different rate, and no assignment, lease or sublease of the rights or franchises hereby granted, whether original or renewal, or of any part thereof, or of any of the routes mentioned herein, or of any part thereof, shall be valid or effectual for any purpose unless the said assignment, lease or sublease shall contain a covenant on the part of the assignee or lessee that the same is subject to all the conditions of this grant, and that the assignee or lessee assumes and will be bound by all of said conditions, and especially said condition as to payments, anything in any statute or the charter of such assignee or lessee to the contrary notwithstanding, and that the said assignee or lessee waives, so far as this franchise is concerned, any more favorable conditions created by such statute or its charter, and that it will not claim by reason thereof, or otherwise, exemption from liability to perform each and all of the conditions of this grant.

Sixth—The rights and franchises granted hereby shall not be assigned, either in whole or in part, or leased or sublet in any manner, nor shall title thereto, or right, interest or property therein, pass to or vest in any other person or corporation whatsoever, either by the act of the New York and Long Island Traction Company, its successors or assigns, or by operation of law, whether under the provisions of the statutes relating to the consolidation or merger of corporations or otherwise, without the consent of the City of New York, acting by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, or its successors in authority, evidenced by an instrument under seal, anything herein contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding, and the granting, giving or waiving of any one or more of such consents shall not render unnecessary any subsequent consent or consents.

Seventh—The said railway may be operated by overhead electrical power, substantially similar to the system of overhead electrical traction now in use by the New York and North Shore Railroad Company, or by the underground electric system now in use by the Interurban Street Railway Company in the Borough of Manhattan, and by any other motive power, except locomotive steam power or horse-power, which may be approved by the Board of Railroad Commissioners, and consented to by the owners of property, in accordance with the provisions of the Railroad Law.

Provided that the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, or its successors in authority, upon giving to the grantee, its successors or assigns, one year's notice, in writing, may require it or them to operate its railway upon the whole or upon any portion of its route by underground electrical power substantially according to the system now in use on the railways in the Borough of Manhattan above referred to, and thereupon to discontinue the use of the overhead trolley system, and to remove its poles, wires and other structures used by it for that purpose from the streets and highways and bridges of The City of New York.

Eighth—The said railway shall be constructed, maintained and operated subject to the supervision and control of all the authorities of The City of New York, who have jurisdiction in such matters under the Charter of the City.

Ninth—Said railway shall be constructed and operated in the latest improved manner of street railway construction and operation, and the railway and property of said company shall be maintained in good condition throughout the term of this grant.

Tenth—The rate of fare for any passenger upon said railway shall not exceed five cents within the limits of The City of New York; the said company shall not charge any passenger more than said sum for one continuous ride from any point on said railway, or a line or branch operated in connection therewith to any point thereof, or of any connecting line or branch thereof, within the limits of The City of New York. The rates for the carrying of property upon the cars of the grantee shall in all cases be reasonable in amount, and shall be subject to the control of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, or its successors in authority, and may be fixed by such Board after notice and hearing to the grantee, and when so fixed such rate shall be binding upon said grantee, its successors or assigns, and no greater sums shall be charged for such services than provided for by it.

Eleventh—The cars on the said lines as proposed shall run at intervals of not more than one hour, both day and night, and as much oftener as the reasonable convenience of the public may require, or as may be directed by the City ordinances; provided, however, that said railway company during the first five years of its franchise shall not be required to operate its cars on any of its lines within The City of New York between the hours of twelve o'clock midnight and five o'clock a. m. each day, unless the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of said City shall determine after a hearing had thereon that public convenience requires the operation of its cars during said hours.

Twelfth—The said railway company shall apply to each car run over said railway a proper fender and wheelguard in conformity to such laws and ordinances as are now in force or may hereafter be enacted or adopted by the State or City authorities.

Thirteenth—All cars on said railway shall be heated through the cold weather in conformity to such laws and ordinances as are now in force, or may hereafter be enacted or adopted by the State or City authorities, and each car shall be well lighted either by the Pintsch gas system or by electricity, or by some system of lighting equally efficient.

Fourteenth—The said company shall at all times keep the street between its tracks, and for a distance of two feet beyond the rails upon either side of said streets, free and clear from ice and snow.

Fifteenth—The said railway company, as long as it shall continue to use any of the tracks upon said streets and highways and bridges, shall have and keep in permanent repair that portion of the surface of said streets and highways and bridges, between its tracks, the rails of its tracks and two feet in width outside of its tracks, under the supervision of the proper local authorities, and whenever required by them to do so, and in such manner as they may prescribe. And The City of New York shall have the right to change the material or character of the pavement of any street and highway and bridge, and in that event the grantee, its successors or assigns, shall be bound to replace such pavement in the manner directed by the proper city officer at its own expense, and the provision as to repairs herein contained shall apply to such renewed or altered pavement.

Sixteenth—The said railway company, its successors and assigns, so long as it shall continue to use any of the tracks upon the streets and highways and bridges hereby granted, shall cause the entire roadway of each of the same to be watered at least three times in every twenty-four hours when the thermometer is above 35 degrees Fahrenheit, except that when the width of any roadway between curb lines shall exceed 60 feet, then a roadway of but 60 feet shall be watered as above.

Seventeenth—In case of any violation or breach or failure to comply with any of the provisions herein contained this grant may be forfeited and avoided by The City of New York, by a suit brought by the Corporation Counsel on notice of ten days to the said railway company.

Eighteenth—If any of the streets and highways and bridges above referred to, or described, shall not now be open or in use as public highways, nor right or franchise therein shall vest in the grantee by virtue of this ordinance until after such streets and highways and bridges shall be legally opened as a public highway, and such right or franchise shall expire at the end of the term created by this ordinance as above set forth. Nothing in this ordinance contained shall be construed as an obligation on The City of New York, in respect to the opening of such streets and highways and bridges, nor as in any manner granting property or rights of any kind in or upon its lands now owned or occupied by it under any title, except only the public streets and highways and bridges in the usual acceptance of such terms, which are specifically referred to above.

Section 3. This grant is also upon the further and express condition that the provisions of Article 4 of the Railroad Law, as it existed at the time of the adoption of this ordinance applicable thereto, and all laws or ordinances now in force or which may be adopted hereafter affecting the surface railways operating in The City of New York shall be strictly complied with.

Section 4. This grant is also upon the further and express condition that at any time after five years from the commencement of the operation of any portion of the railway hereby granted, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, or its successors in authority, if it deems it necessary in the public interest so to do, may require the grantee, its successors or assigns, in case the railway upon any portion of the routes above described shall consist of a single track, to construct and operate a second track upon any or all of the routes hereby granted, whether on streets, highways and bridges or upon any private property or right-of-way included in any of such routes so as to make a double-track railway.

Section 5. Said grantee shall commence construction within three months from the date when it has obtained complete legal authority to begin construction, including necessary permits from the city officials and departments and shall complete the construction of at least six miles of single track railway on or before January 1, 1905, otherwise this grant shall be reupon forthwith and immediately forfeited, without judicial or other proceedings. If upon any of the routes above described, or upon any portion thereof, there shall not be constructed and in actual operation by July 1, 1906, a railway properly equipped and operated as provided by this ordinance, the said route or portion thereof shall be conclusively taken to have been abandoned by the company, and so much of the rights and franchises hereby granted as pertains to such routes, or parts of routes, not then constructed from and after July 1, 1906, shall be thereupon forthwith and immediately forfeited, without judicial or other proceedings. Provided that such time may be extended upon the same conditions as to forfeiture under and for causes specified in section 99 of the Railroad Law, as it now exists, and by a properly executed instrument in writing; and the Board of Estimate and Apportionment may similarly extend such time for a period or periods not exceeding one year, if, in their discretion, it seems best so to do, and that the city officials or departments who or which shall at the time of such construction have authority over the said streets and highways and bridges, may similarly extend, by properly executed instrument in writing, such time for a period or periods not exceeding one year, if reasonable, in their judgment, by reason of requirements as to the manner of construction imposed by the city officials.

Section 6. If for any reason the right or franchise of the grantee in any of the streets, highways and bridges above described shall cease, or for a period of six successive months the railway tracks upon any of such streets, highways and bridges shall not be operated as provided for in this ordinance, the Comptroller of The City of New York may require the grantee, its successors or assigns, to remove its tracks and other structures upon such streets, highways and bridges within thirty days after notice, and in default of their removal pursuant to such notice, the proper local authorities having jurisdiction may cause them to be removed and The City of New York may recover the cost and expenses of such removal, either by deducting them from the fund deposited as required in Section 7 hereof, or by action; and the rights and franchises of the grantee, its successors or assigns, in such portions of the streets, highways and bridges, in case any such act, shall forthwith and immediately cease upon the removal of such tracks or structures and without judicial or other proceedings.

Section 7. This grant is upon the express condition that the New York and Long Island Traction Company, within thirty days after the said company has been duly authorized to operate its railway and before anything is done in exercise of the rights conferred thereby, shall deposit with the Comptroller of The City of New York the sum of three thousand dollars, either in money or in securities to be approved by him, which fund shall be security for the performance by such company of the terms and conditions of this grant, especially those which relate to the payment of the annual charge for the franchise, the repairs of the street pavement and the removal of snow and ice, and the quality of construction of the railway and, in case of default in the performance by said company of such terms and conditions, The City of New York shall have the right to cause the work to be done and the materials to be furnished for the performance thereof after due notice, and shall collect the reasonable cost thereof from the said fund without legal proceedings, or after default in the payment of the annual charges shall collect the same with interest from such fund after ten days' notice in writing to the said company. Or in case of failure to keep the said terms and conditions of this grant relating to the headways of cars, fenders and wheel guards and the heating of the cars and the watering of the streets, the said company shall pay a penalty of $50 a day for each day of violation, and the further sum of $10 a day for each car which shall not properly be heated or supplied with fenders and wheel guards in case of the violation of the provisions relating to those matters. NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS TO BIDDERS.

The person or persons making a bid or estimate for any services, work, materials or supplies for The City of New York, or for any of its departments, bureaus or offices, shall furnish the same in a sealed envelope, indorsed with the title of the supplies, materials, work or services for which the bid or estimate is made, with his or their name or names and the date of presentation to the President or Board or to the head of the Department at his or its office, on or before the date and hour named in the advertisement for the same, at which time and place the estimates received will be publicly opened by the President or Board or head of said Department and read, and the award of the contract made according to law as soon thereafter as practicable.

Each bid or estimate shall contain the name and place of residence of the person making the same, the names of all persons interested with him therein, and, if no other person be so interested, it shall distinctly state that fact; also, that it is made without any connection with any other person making an estimate for the same purpose, and is in all respects fair and without collusion or fraud, and that no member of the Board of Aldermen, head of a department, chief of a bureau, deputy thereof, or clerk therein, or other officer of The City of New York is, shall be or become interested, directly or indirectly, as contracting party, partner, stockholder, surety or otherwise in or in the performance of the contract, or in the supplies, work or business to which it relates, or in any portion of the profits thereof. The bid or estimate must be verified by the oath, in writing, of the party or parties making the estimate that the several matters stated herein are in all respects true.

Each bid or estimate shall be accompanied by the consent, in writing, of two householders or freeholders in The City of New York, or of a guaranty or surety company duly authorized by law to act as surety, and shall contain the matters set forth in the blank forms mentioned below.

No bid or estimate will be considered unless, as a condition precedent to the reception or consideration of any proposal, it be accompanied by a certified check upon one of the State or National banks of The City of New York, drawn to the order of the Comptroller, or money to the amount of five per centum of the amount of the bond required, as provided in section 420 of the Greater New York Charter.

The certified check or money should not be enclosed in the envelope containing the bid or estimate, but should be either inclosed in a separate envelope addressed to the head of the Department, President or Board, or submitted personally upon the presentation of the bid or estimate.

For particulars as to the quantity and quality of the supplies, or the nature and extent of the work, reference must be made to the specifications, schedules, plans, etc., on file in the said office of the President, Board or Department.

No bid shall be accepted from or contract awarded to any person who is in arrears to The City of New York upon debt or contract, or who is a defaulter, as surety or otherwise, upon any obligation to the City.

The contract must be bid for separately. The right is reserved in each case to reject all bids or estimates if it is deemed to be for the interest of the City so to do.

Bidders will write out the amount of their bids or estimates in addition to inserting the same in figures.

Bidders are requested to make their bids or estimates upon the blank forms prepared and furnished by the City, a copy of which, with the proper envelope in which to inclose the bid, together with a copy of the contract, including the specifications, in the form approved by the Corporation Counsel, can be obtained upon application thereto at the office of the Department for which the work is to be done. Plans and drawings of construction work may also be seen there.
