| Introduction and Executive Summary

The following report has been prepared pursuant to Local Law 28 of 2023 (“LL28”) which mandates the Department of Citywide Administrative Services (“DCAS”) to publish and submit to the mayor and speaker of the New York City Council (“the Council”) an annual report on civil service examination outcomes, including the number of applicants for an exam, the number of passers, eligible list certifications, and accepted appointments. The legislation also mandates the inclusion of information on candidates’ participation in, as well as their completion of, city agency training programs (e.g., academy class) that are required for or relevant to, civil service appointments or promotions. LL28 requires a list of agencies’ recruitment activities and expenditures related to recruiting candidates for open-competitive and promotional civil service examinations, as well as a list of any preparatory materials developed for applicants or potential applicants for those examinations.

This report examines the data for Fiscal Year 2024 (July 1, 2023, to June 30, 2024) (“FY24”). It also includes an analysis of institutional processes and policies that provide equal opportunity for a diverse universe of municipal employees. The report also highlights the strategic outreach efforts that the City of New York (“the City”) has undertaken to diversify recruitment and hiring through the civil service examination process.

Summary of Findings

- The City continuously attracts a large population of diverse candidates to its civil service examinations. In FY24, the total number of applicants for open-competitive civil service examinations, promotional civil service examinations, and qualified incumbent examinations was 93,302. The majority of applicants originated from Brooklyn and Queens, followed by the Bronx.
 - The data shows that most applicants for civil service examinations are racially and ethnically diverse. In FY24, 33,090 (35.4%) applicants self-identified as Black or African American, 21,874 (23.4%) self-identified as Hispanic or Latino, and 14,464 (15.5%) self-identified as Asian, all exceeding 13,876 (14.8%) who self-identified as White.
 - The data for FY24 indicates that the majority of applicants for civil service examinations self-identified as male or man, as observed in Fiscal Year 2023 (“FY23”). The civil service examination titles and type of exams offered likely contributed to the composition of exam applicants.
- Examination data shows that ultimately more self-identified females (473,294; 53.5%) than self-identified males (386,576; 43.7%) were candidates on eligible lists that were certified to agencies in FY24 for consideration to fill vacancies.
- In FY24, almost three-quarters (74%) of all training program participants identified as male or man. The over-representation of men in these training programs is associated with the occupational segregation within certain civil service titles, such as, Police Officers, Sanitation Worker, Special Officers, and Park Rangers, where women have been traditionally underrepresented nationally. This trend has held true for the past two (2) fiscal years.

- The City has implemented initiatives to address the gender disparity among applicants, including recruitment efforts geared directly towards women, such as the Empowering Women Through Information event in Brooklyn, and the Nontraditional Employment for Women (NEW) event in Manhattan. These efforts aim to address occupational segregation by providing information and more opportunities for women to apply and potentially be appointed.
- Agencies spent approximately $4.3M in FY24 to promote job vacancies requiring open-competitive or promotional civil service examinations. An accurate analysis of spending by borough is not feasible for this report, as city agencies do not disaggregate marketing and recruiting expenditure by geography. Most agencies monitor and report their marketing cost in the aggregate, by platforms that reach New Yorkers in all boroughs. City agencies use a multi-channel approach, including television, news media (local and ethnic outlets), subway ads, digital ads, and social media, as well as in-person recruitment events to recruit a diversity of New York applicants.
- Agencies across the City conducted a total of 3,962 recruitment events in all five (5) boroughs and neighboring areas in FY24 to promote civil service examination-based job opportunities. This data shows a 68% increase in the number of events from FY23. In addition, city agencies held over 100 virtual events to complement traditional outreach efforts, reflecting increasing efforts to reach diverse job seekers that rely on online platforms for their job search.

| Data and Methodology¹

This report is categorized into four (4) key areas based on the following requirements of LL28:

1. Data on DCAS-administered open-competitive, qualified incumbent and promotional civil service examinations in FY24.
2. Data submitted to DCAS on city agency-administered training programs in FY24.
3. City agency-reported expenditures related to recruiting candidates for open-competitive and promotional civil service examinations; and
4. A general overview of citywide recruiting events organized by all city agencies.

City agencies that report to the mayor, as well as agencies of other elected officials – including the Council, the Office of the Public Advocate, District Attorneys, and the Offices of Borough Presidents (including community boards) – and commissions such as the Civil Service

¹ All data in this report has been aggregated by borough and disaggregated by demographics, including gender, and race or ethnicity, where applicable.

Commission, the Equal Employment Practices Commission, the Board of Correction, and each borough's Public Administrator office, were required to submit training data to DCAS. This includes applicant demographic data (if applicable), recruitment expenditures, and a list of recruitment events. For a list of all complying agencies, see Appendix A.

Sources of data and information reviewed for the preparation of this report include:

1. FY 2024 civil service examinations data provided by DCAS.²
2. Data on training programs, civil service recruitment events, and exam recruitment expenditures, provided by individual agencies³.
3. Promotional materials from individual agencies.

| FY24 NYC Civil Service Examinations: Open-Competitive, Promotions, and Qualified Incumbent Examinations

Per LL28, the below section analyzes the following indicators, using examinations data provided by DCAS:

The total number of applicants ("Applicants") for open-competitive civil service examinations, promotional civil service examinations, and qualified incumbent examinations, and the number of applicants who:

1. Took the computer-based multiple-choice portion of such examination ("Multiple Choice Test Takers").
2. Achieved a passing score on the computer-based multiple-choice portion of such examination ("Multiple Choice Test Passers").
3. Took the computer-based rated Education and Experience ("E&E") portion of such examination ("E&E Test Takers").
4. Achieved a passing score on the computer-based rated Education and Experience ("E&E") portion of such examination ("E&E Test Passers").
5. Were invited to take the physical portion of such examination ("Invited to Physical Tests").
6. Took, or began to take, the physical portion of such examination ("Took Physical Tests").
7. Passed the physical portion of such examination ("Passed Physical Tests").

² A total of 200 civil service exams were considered in this analysis.

³ The training program data is only for programs that were administered, completed, and where a hire was made in FY24.

8. Were certified on an eligible list (“Certified to Agencies”).
9. Accepted any appointment to a position that was offered (“Appointed by Agencies”).
10. Were on an existing eligible (Promotional) candidate list (“Eligibles on Promotion Lists”), for Promotional exams.

When reviewing the total number for each of the above indicators, as specified and defined by the LL28, a direct relationship cannot be drawn between each category due to the varying data sources and current civil service examination process. The time from administration of an exam to establishment of a list of qualified candidates varies based on the type of exam. For example, a list of qualified candidates for an E&E exam may be available much more quickly than the list for an exam that requires a physical test portion.

Furthermore, the “Applicant” indicator consists of all the candidates who applied for a civil service examination in FY24, regardless of whether the exam was fully administered during the same fiscal year. Similarly, the number of multiple-choice, E&E, and physical “Test Takers” includes information from exams that were completed during FY24, but where the application period may have been open in the previous fiscal year. The “Test Passers” category does not reflect the full universe of all the test takers because the candidate lists are established on a rolling basis as the exams are scored, which can vary from six (6) to nine (9) months due to the civil service process. As a result, the number of test passers may increase significantly once all the exams from FY24 are scored and established.

The “Certified to Agencies” and “Appointed by Agencies” are dynamic categories that change as eligible lists are established on an ongoing basis. Therefore, the total reflected in the Table A:1 represents a snapshot of the total number of individuals included and appointed from lists that were certified to agencies on or after July 1, 2023, up to June 30, 2024.

The “Eligibles on Promotion” total includes eligibles on an established, non-terminated, eligible list for promotional exams that were in existence on June 30, 2024.

Civil Service Examination Data by New York City Borough

In FY24, the total number of applicants for open-competitive civil service examinations, promotional civil service examinations, and qualified incumbent examinations was 93,302, reflecting a 19% decrease from FY23. The highest number of applicants originated from Brooklyn (26,512 applicants; 28.4%) and Queens (23,778 applicants; 25.5%), followed by the Bronx (15,067 applicants; 16.1%). The higher representation of applicants residing in Brooklyn and Queens is in proportion to the city’s population breakdown⁴: Brooklyn consists of 31% of New York City’s population share in 2020 followed closely by Queens (25%).

Civil Service Examination Data by Gender

The data for FY24 in Table A.2 on the next two pages reports that the majority of applicants self-identified as male or man. As observed in prior public reports, occupational segregation – the over- or under-representation of certain demographic categories (e.g., gender and by race/ethnicity) in certain occupations – continues as a feature of the New York City municipal workforce. This leads to over- and under-representation of certain demographics within some civil service titles, including, in some cases, near homogeneity⁹.

Nevertheless, the data shows that the process ultimately results in the inclusion of more females (473,294; 53.5%) than males (386,576; 43.7%) on eligible lists certified to agencies however, less females (a 56% decrease) were appointed to positions in FY24 in contrast to FY23. Within FY24 more males (9,927) than females (4,895) were appointed by agencies from eligible lists certified to agencies.

Civil Service Examination Data by Race and Ethnicity

The civil service candidate data show that the vast majority of applicants for civil service examinations are in fact racial/ethnic minorities. In FY24, the cumulative representation of minorities including Asian, Black, and Hispanic (69,615; 74.6%) exceeded those who self-identified as White (13,876; 15%) among civil service applicants. This trend has remained consistent from FY23 to FY24.

The data in Table A.3 on the next two pages also show that a higher representation of Black or African American and Hispanics are appointed by agencies when compared to those who identified as White.

| FY24 NYC Civil Service Examinations: Training Programs

The following section includes data from agencies on training programs that are required for, or relevant to, an applicant's appointment to a position based on an open-competitive civil service examination or a promotional civil service examination, the name of the agency training program, the total number of applicants enrolled in such program, and the number of applicants who:

- Completed the program.
- Passed and graduated from the program, if applicable.
- Passed but did not graduate from the program, if applicable.
- Did not pass nor graduate from the program, if applicable.
- Accepted any appointment offered based on graduation from the program, if applicable.

A complete list with the names of the agency training programs reviewed for the subsequent analysis is available in Appendix D.

Most civil service titles do not mandate an additional training component for full-time appointment and, therefore, only a small number of agencies administer mandatory training for selected titles. If an agency is not listed, then the agency either did not submit data to DCAS, does not have a training program, or did not conduct any such training in FY24.

Training Program Data by New York City Boroughs

In FY24, there were a total of 6,239 applicants who enrolled in an agency training program that is required for, or relevant to, an applicant's appointment to a position based on an open-competitive civil service examination or a promotional civil service examination. This represents a decrease from FY23 (7,129 total enrolled applicants) due to a number of programs that did not qualify as eligible under LL28 for FY24. Of the total number of FY24 applicants, 89% (5,567) passed and graduated from the programs and 87% (4,824) of those graduates accepted an appointment, including promotions, offered based on successful graduation from the program.

Approximately one-third of all participants reside outside the five (5) boroughs (30%), almost a quarter in Queens (22%) and less than a fifth live in Brooklyn (19%). It should be noted that many of the large training programs are administered by uniform agencies (e.g., Police Academy, Correction Officer Academy, and FDNY Academy) where these titles are exempted from the residency requirement of living within the five (5) New York City boroughs

Training Program Data by Gender

The demographic composition of the training program participants is dependent on who applied to these civil service titles and successfully completed the civil service examination. In FY24, nearly three quarters (74%) of all participants self-identified as male or man and almost one-quarter (22.3%) as female or woman. The concentrated representation of male or man in these training programs is associated with the occupational segregation within these civil service titles (e.g., Police Officers, Sanitation Workers, Special Officers, Firefighters, Parks Rangers, etc.) in which women have been traditionally underrepresented nationally. A longitudinal comparison of this representation may reveal whether the City's ongoing efforts to build a more diverse workforce will shift future gender distribution among test takers in these civil service titles. However, from FY23 to FY24 these trends have remained the same.

Training Program Data by Race and Ethnicity

In FY24, training participants who self-identified as Black (22.3%) and Hispanic (26.5%) accounted for almost half of the total training program participants. Asians (12.9%) represent the smallest group among training program participants. More than a quarter of training participants (29%) self-identified as White.

| Expenditures Related to Recruiting for Open-Competitive and Promotional Civil Service Examinations

Agencies across the city conducted a total of 3,960 recruitment events in all five (5) boroughs and neighboring areas in FY24 to promote civil service examination-based job opportunities. In addition, agencies also held over 100 virtual events to complement traditional outreach efforts, signifying a growing shift to reach diverse job seekers that rely on online platforms for their job search.

A list of agencies' FY24 recruitment events aggregated by location is available in Appendix C. If an agency is not listed, they either did not submit data to DCAS or did not participate in any recruiting events promoting civil service titles in FY24.

Agencies spent $4,361,421²⁵ cumulatively in FY24 promoting job vacancies requiring civil service examinations, including open-competitive civil service examinations and promotional civil service examinations.

An accurate analysis of spending by borough is not feasible for this report because city agencies do not disaggregate marketing and recruiting expenditure geographically. To optimize dissemination of information to the largest number of New Yorkers, New York City agencies use a multi-channel approach, including television, news media (local and ethnic outlets), subway ads, digital ads, and social media, as well as in-person recruitment events. Therefore, most agencies track their marketing costs in aggregate by platform, such as digital vs. print, which reach New York City residents universally. Only a handful of agencies were able to provide their FY24 expenditure by boroughs in the table below, reflecting primarily the recruitment costs for in-person events.

DCAS will continue to encourage agencies to monitor their spending on a borough level for future reporting.

Expenditures by Borough (in $), FY24:

- Bronx: $175
- Brooklyn: $500
- Manhattan: $1,675
- Queens: $900

²⁵ Approximate amount due to recruitment marketing fund being combined for those positions requiring civil service exams and those that do not

- Staten Island: $800
- Digital: $0
- Citywide Total²⁶: $4,361,421

| Equal Opportunity for Municipal Employees and Applicants

New York City's Efforts to Ensure and Enhance Equity

LL28 requires an evaluation of the City's efforts to provide fair and effective affirmative employment and recruitment practices to ensure Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) and diversification of candidates who seek employment with the City of New York through Civil Service Examinations.

DCAS' commitment to diversity, equity and inclusion means ensuring that city government leads the way in having a diverse and inclusive workforce that is reflective of the city it serves. That includes providing EEO to all the city's potential workforce and providing all city employees with equal opportunities to further build their careers.

New York City agencies are guided by the City's Equal Employment Opportunity Policy (EEO Policy) and federal, state and local laws. City policy requires agencies to foster a workplace culture in which employment and advancement decisions are made fairly and employees are treated equitably. The City's employer diversity and non-discrimination statement, which is included in all job postings, is as follows:

"The City of New York is an inclusive equal opportunity employer committed to recruiting and retaining a diverse workforce and providing a work environment that is free from discrimination and harassment based upon any legally protected status or protected characteristic including, but not limited to, an individual's sex, race, color, ethnicity, national origin, age, religion, disability, sexual orientation, veteran status, gender identity, or pregnancy."

DCAS continues to monitor employment legislation and policies to ensure that the City's EEO Policy is reflective of the latest workplace protections.

Furthermore, employment by the City of New York is largely governed by the New York State civil service law. Approximately 81% of employees hold competitive class titles, which are titles for which it is deemed practicable to test the merit and fitness of job applicants by competitive examination.

Appointments to positions in the competitive class are made from lists established using competitive civil service examinations. Job applicants are required to meet eligibility requirements and take an exam, and those who pass the exam must meet Minimum Qualification Requirements (MQRs) to be considered for selection by agencies based on their exam score. Individuals are ranked from highest to lowest score. Under New York State civil service law, to fill available vacancies for the title and to ensure that hiring decisions are based on an objective measure of merit and fitness, agencies must select at least one (1) of the three (3) highest ranked candidates who are able and willing to be appointed.

Initiatives to Promote Civil Service Exams to Increase the City's Workforce

The FY23 City's Workforce Profile Report shows that racial/ethnic minorities and women continue to constitute a significant proportion of the City's workforce. That is an important indication that the City's inclusive practices are effective in attracting diverse applicants to positions in city government.

DCAS provides support to agencies in recruitment and hiring by increasing access for groups that are underrepresented in city government to civil service exams and city government careers. Below are ways in which DCAS has aimed to support this initiative.

- DCAS, through its Office of Citywide Recruitment (OCR), is responsible for conducting outreach to build a diverse talent pipeline of applicants through educating the public on civil service examinations and city government career pathways. DCAS partners with educational institutions, community-based organizations, faith-based institutions and elected officials to educate the public on civil service career opportunities. DCAS also conducts outreach to historically underrepresented and underserved communities, including communities of color, people with disabilities, veterans, women, youth, justice-impacted individuals and the LGBTQI+ community. Through such efforts, the City builds pathways to ensure the City's workforce represents the diversity of the City of New York. In FY24, DCAS participated in over 186 outreach events, reaching over 16,600 participants.
- DCAS created and administers the NYC Bridge Exam, a single exam that covers 10 different civil service titles. This allowed test takers to take a single exam and pay just one (1) fee and be eligible for hiring under 10 different civil service titles. In FY24, 3,158 candidates took this exam.
- DCAS updated the Online Application System (OASys) that is used for reviewing and applying for civil service examinations so that it is now compatible with mobile devices.
- DCAS now issues a monthly NYC Jobs newsletter featuring updates on civil service examinations, current city jobs submitted by different agencies and upcoming recruitment events.

- DCAS partnered with the Department of Youth and Community Development (DYCD) to increase the number of Summer Youth Employment Program (SYEP) participants across the city. In addition to increasing the number of participants, DCAS conducts Civil Service 101 (CS101) information sessions for participants to inform them of the civil service examination process and the various career opportunities available in city government.
- DCAS manages the City's 55-a Program²⁷, a program that allows people with disabilities to be hired into competitive class positions without taking competitive exams. All city agencies with competitive positions are encouraged to participate in the 55-a Program to advance equity and career access for New Yorkers with disabilities. Through partnership with the Mayor's Office for People with Disabilities (MOPD), DCAS continues to educate agencies' 55-a coordinators, human resources staff and hiring managers on effectively using the 55-a Program for recruitment and the application process.
- DCAS builds city agencies' recruitment capacities by sharing monthly recruitment calendar of events and training agency staff on recruitment strategies for their agency needs and promoting the civil service exams.
- DCAS coordinates with agencies to host CityTalk panel discussions that spotlight diverse employees across various agencies and the different career paths available within the city. Serving to promote open positions that some agencies need to urgently fill, while showcasing the inclusivity of city government to various demographics in the public, these sessions spotlight LGBTQI+ employees, veterans, employees with disabilities and ethnic groups in recognition of their respective heritage months.
- DCAS organizes citywide NYC Government Hiring Halls to provide the opportunity for individuals expressing interest in civil service to engage with representatives from various city agencies. These events are characterized by on-the-spot interviews conducted by the agencies who had budget-approved positions. These Hiring Halls were strategically hosted across all five (5) boroughs of New York City in FY23 through FY24, ensuring accessibility and outreach to a broad spectrum of potential candidates. Attendees were offered the opportunity to apply for and obtain city government positions.
- By facilitating direct interactions and immediate interviews, these events played a crucial role in streamlining the hiring process and connecting qualified individuals with diverse job opportunities within city government. The Hiring Halls allowed all city agencies that participated to address the recruitment needs and resource strains that arose during the COVID-19 pandemic. A total of two (2) Hiring Halls were held between June 2023 and July 2024, after which JobsNYC took over.
- DCAS hosted a biennial HR/EEO conference which included knowledge-sharing discussions where EEO Officers, Human Resources and Diversity, Equity and Inclusion (DEI) professionals can have candid conversations on topics that are relevant to their work. Topics and resources included:

²⁷ Section 55-a of the New York State Civil Service Law allows qualified people with a certified mental or physical disability to be hired into competitive civil service positions without taking an exam.

- Hiring and onboarding DEI leaders to oversee the management and implementation of various DEI related programs and initiatives, including the development of gender equity toolkits.
- Establishing and promoting equity-related working groups focused on increasing diversity in the agency's recruitment efforts and promoting inclusion within the workplace.
- Development of equity toolkits designed to equip managers with resources and strategies for implementing deliberate measures to promote equity in the workplace.
