

Special Feature

Ballot proposals

This year, you will be voting on important proposals to change the New York State Constitution and the New York City Charter. The text and abstract of the State ballot proposals start on page 33.

Turn to page 35 for in-depth coverage of the City ballot proposals, including statements from the public both for and against these proposals.

Ballot proposals are located on the right-hand side of the ballot either near the top or near the bottom corner. Please check the ballot carefully and make sure you vote on these important proposals.

Welcome to the 2003 City Council General Election Voter Guide

New York City Campaign Finance Board

As you know, 2003 is a major election year in New York City. Every 10 years, City Council districts change based on the most recent census. This year, City Council district lines have been redrawn, and all 51 Council seats are up for election. You will make important decisions shaping the future of our City and its leadership by voting in the general election this fall. This Voter Guide is designed to help you compare candidates and make choices about ballot proposals as you prepare to vote in the November 4 general election.

The Voter Guide is a nonpartisan, plain-language handbook published by the New York City Campaign Finance Board (the "CFB"), an independent City agency, to give you information about City elections. Under the City Charter, the Guide is printed in English and Spanish, and, consistent with Federal voting laws, it is also distributed in Chinese and Korean in some districts. It contains statements and photos submitted by City Council candidates, information on voting and voters' rights, information on City and State ballot proposals, and maps to help you determine your City Council district.

The CFB administers the New York City Campaign Finance Program. The Program reduces the influence of private money on City campaigns, offers qualified candidates a fair chance to run for office by providing public matching funds for small contributions, and makes available detailed information on candidates' campaign finances. To learn more about the Program and the CFB, see "NYC's Campaign Finance Program" on page 13, or visit our Web site, www.nyccfb.info.

Informed voters strengthen democracy. We hope that this 2003 General Election Voter Guide will help you make informed choices on election day.

Sincerely,

The Office of City Council Member

The City Council is the legislative, or law-making, branch of City government. The City Council is responsible for passing local laws for New York City, making decisions about land use, investigating and overseeing City agencies, and approving the City's budget. Each Council member represents one of the 51 New York City Council districts. Council members receive an annual base salary of $90,000. Council leaders and chairs of committees receive additional pay. Council members may hold other jobs in addition to their Council seats.

General Election Date: Tuesday, November 4, 2003

The polls will be open from 6:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. You must be inside your polling site no later than 9:00 p.m. to vote. See pages 7-8 regarding whether you are eligible to vote in this election.

DEMOCRACY DOESN'T WORK WITHOUT YOU.
GO VOTE.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION

Even if you haven't moved, you may be in a different City Council district this year.

City Council district lines were redrawn for the 2003 (and future) elections based on the 2000 Census.

If you received this Voter Guide in the mail, your Council district number (according to records provided by the NYC Board of Elections) is printed on the address label above your name.

You can also determine whether you are in a new Council district by:

1. Carefully checking the maps provided in the center of this Guide.
2. Calling the NYC Board of Elections toll-free hotline 866-VOTE-NYC or, for the hearing impaired, calling (212) 487-5496.
3. Logging on to www.nycclfb.info and using the "find your district" feature in the online Voter Guide.

Your Rights as a Voter

You have the right to vote in the November 4, 2003 general election if:

- you registered to vote by October 10, and
- you are inside your polling place no later than 9:00 p.m. on November 4, 2003.

You also have a right to:

- Get help from an interpreter supplied by the Board of Elections at some polling sites if you speak Spanish, Chinese, or Korean. Call the Board of Elections' toll-free voter assistance number, 866-VOTE-NYC (866-868-3692), for more information, including which polling sites have interpreters available.
- Bring anyone except your employer or union agent to help you in the voting booth if you are a person with a disability or if you cannot read the ballot, including someone to interpret the ballot for you.
- Ask election workers how to use the voting machine.
- Bring materials into the voting booth with you, including this Voter Guide. (Please take these materials away with you when you finish voting.)
- Vote by paper ballot if the voting machine is broken.
- Vote by "affidavit ballot" if your name is missing from the list of voters at your poll site (see page 10).

You do not have to show identification to vote in this election.

Questions and Answers about Voting

Can I vote in the November 4 general election?

If you are registered to vote in New York City, you can vote in the November 4 general election, which will include races for City Council and important City and State ballot proposals.

I don't know if I am registered to vote. How do I find out, and how do I register?

If you do not know whether you are registered to vote, call the Board of Elections' (the "BOE") toll-free voter assistance number, 866-VOTE-NYC (866-868-3692), or, for the hearing impaired, call (212) 487-5496 to find out.

If you are a registered voter, you should receive a notice from the BOE in August telling you where your polling place is. If you do not get a notice, call 866-VOTE-NYC to find out whether you are registered to vote.

October 10, 2003 was the last day to register for the November 4 general election. To register for future elections, you must fill out a voter registration form and file it in person or by mail with any of the following BOE offices:

Main Office

32 Broadway, 7th Floor
New York, NY 10004
(212) 487-5300

Brooklyn

345 Adams Street, 4th Floor
Brooklyn, NY 11201
(718) 797-8800

Manhattan

200 Varick Street, 10th Floor
New York, NY 10014
(212) 886-3800

Queens

42-16 West Street, 5th Floor
Long Island City, NY 11101
(718) 392-8989

The Bronx

1780 Grand Concourse, 5th Floor
Bronx, NY 10457
(718) 299-9017

Staten Island

One Edgewater Plaza, 4th Floor
Staten Island, NY 10305
(718) 876-0079

Voter registration forms are available at these offices. You can also get a registration form and other information by calling 866-VOTE-NYC. You can download and print a registration form on the BOE's Web site, www.vote.nyc.ny.us, or fill out a request online to have a form mailed to you. However they are obtained, voter registration forms must be filled out, signed, and either mailed or hand delivered to one of the offices listed above, because they must have an original signature (in ink) to be valid.

Please note: You cannot submit your voter registration form via the BOE's Web site; you may only download or request one.

How long is my registration good for?

Your registration has no expiration date. However, your registration may have been cancelled if you moved and did not update your address with the BOE and you did not vote in the 2000 or 2002 (federal) elections. Call 866-VOTE-NYC for more information.

What if I have moved (within New York City)?

If you have moved since you last voted, you must change your address with the BOE by submitting a new voter registration form and checking the box labeled “Address change.” See above for more information on obtaining and submitting a voter registration form.

If you have moved within New York City and you have not changed your address with the BOE, you may still be able to vote by going to your new polling place and filling out an affidavit ballot that will be available there. However, it is best to update your registration whenever you move by filling out a voter registration form with your new address and sending it to the BOE.

What will I be voting on in the November 4 general election?

You can vote for one City Council candidate running in your Council district. You may also vote for candidates for other offices that are on the ballot but not covered by this Voter Guide, such as district attorney and judicial offices. You will also be voting on ballot proposals to amend the New York State Constitution and the New York City Charter. The State proposals are on page 33. City ballot proposals are covered extensively beginning on page 35.

What candidates will be on the ballot in the November 4 general election?

Candidates nominated by the five political parties recognized by the New York State Board of Elections — Republican, Democratic, Independence, Conservative, and Working Families — may run in the general election and may appear on the ballot.

In addition, candidates running as independents may appear on the general election ballot.

Candidates who lost in a party’s primary election on September 9, 2003, may run for office in the general election if they have been nominated by another party or if they run as independents.

I don’t know which Council district I live in. How can I find out?

The maps in the center of this Voter Guide show the new boundaries of the Council districts in your borough so that you can locate your Council district. Please remember that your Council district may have changed since the last time you voted (due to redistricting). Visit the online Guide at www.nycfb.info to “find your district” and view your candidates. You can also call the BOE’s toll-free voter assistance number, 866-VOTE-NYC, to find out.

Does this Voter Guide contain information about all the candidates who will be on the November 4 general election ballot?

Not necessarily. This Guide only has information about candidates running for City Council in the general election. It is possible that you will be voting on candidates for other offices, such as district attorney and judicial offices.

Also, some candidates running for City Council may not have sent information to be included in the Voter Guide, or may have sent in that information too late. However, the names of all general election candidates for City Council known at the time this Guide went to press are listed in “Candidates at a Glance” on page 15. Candidates who did not submit information for the Voter Guide, or did not do so in time, have an asterisk next to their names indicating this.

For the most up-to-date information, visit the online Voter Guide at www.nycfb.info.

Will all the candidates listed in this Voter Guide appear on the November 4 general election ballot?

Not necessarily. It is possible that after this Guide goes to press, some candidates may drop out of the race or be taken off the ballot for legal reasons. Candidates can be removed from the ballot, or put back on the ballot, up until just before the election. So there may be some candidates listed in this Guide who do not appear on the final general election ballot. You should always check the sample ballot at your polling place before voting. You can also check the online Voter Guide for the most recent information at www.nycfb.info.

In what order are the candidates for City Council listed?

The races for each Council district are in numerical order (district 1, district 2, district 3, etc.). Within each Council district, a candidate’s profile appears in the Voter Guide according to the party line on which the candidate is running. As on the ballot, the order of the party lines is Republican, Democratic, Independence, Conservative, and Working Families. This order is set by the New York State Election Law. Candidates running on more than one party line appear only once in this Guide, in the order their names are expected to first appear on the ballot.

There are also independent candidates. These candidates are listed in the Voter Guide in the order in which they will appear on the ballot.

How do I find information about the City Council candidates running in my district?

Check the map in the center of this Voter Guide to determine which Council district you live in, if you do not already know it. To confirm your Council district, call 866-VOTE-NYC. The notice sent to registered voters by the Board of Elections tells you which Council district you live in. You can also check the online Voter Guide, which has a “find your Council district” feature and up-to-date information about the general election, at www.nycfb.info.

Turn to “Candidates at a Glance” on page 15 for a complete list of the candidates known to be running in your district at press time. To find profiles submitted by Council candidates in your district, turn to “The Candidates” section and find the candidates that have your Council district printed at the top of their profiles. Candidate profiles pages are grouped by Council district, then in the order in which the candidates will appear on the ballot. Remember, you may vote for only one of the candidates who are running for City Council in your district.

What if there is only one candidate in my Council district?

It is possible that in some districts there will only be one Council candidate on the ballot. All Council candidates who submitted a Voter Guide statement and are on the ballot will appear in this Guide — even if they do not have an opponent on the ballot. If there is only one candidate running for City Council in your district and you do not wish to vote for him or her, you may “write in” a candidate instead (see page 12 for information on how to write in a candidate’s name).

If I belong to a political party, do I have to vote for the candidate nominated by my party?

No. In the general election you may vote for any candidate you choose, no matter what party you are enrolled in.

Where do I go to vote?

You vote at your local polling place. If you are a registered voter, you should receive a notice from the Board of Elections telling you where your polling place is. Read the notice carefully. If you do not have your postcard or you do not know where to vote, call 866-VOTE-NYC.

When I get to my polling place, where do I go?

The notice you received from the Board of Elections tells you what Assembly District (A.D.) and Election District (E.D.) you live in. These numbers are important because they tell you which voting booth to use. If you forget your A.D. or E.D. on election day, the information clerk or any of the election workers will be able to tell you which booth to use.

What if my name is not on the list when I get to my polling place?

Will I still be able to vote?

If you are not on the poll-list, it may be because your registration form was not received. If you believe that you are eligible, you can still vote. Ask for an affidavit ballot, which is a paper ballot. Fill it out and enclose and seal it in the envelope supplied. On the affidavit envelope give your old and new addresses along with all other required information and remember to sign it. After the election, the Board of Elections will check its records and your vote will be counted if you are indeed eligible to vote. If not, you will receive a notice that you are not eligible to vote, along with a registration form for future elections.

Can I vote if I can’t get to my polling place on election day?

You can vote by absentee ballot for a number of reasons, such as being away at school, on vacation, disabled, or in the hospital. Call 866-VOTE-NYC to find out if you can vote by absentee ballot, and to request an application for an absentee ballot.

If you cannot get to your polling site on election day, you can vote in person (“In Person Absentee Voting”) at the BOE’s office in your borough (see page 7 for addresses). In Person Absentee Voting is conducted from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday for 15 days, ending on election day. It is also conducted from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, November 1 and Sunday, November 2, and from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Monday, November 3 and on general election day, November 4. Call the BOE at 866-VOTE-NYC for more information.

To vote by absentee ballot, follow these two steps:

- 1. File an Absentee Ballot Application. You can have an absentee ballot application mailed to you by calling 866-VOTE-NYC. You can also pick up an application at any of the Board of Elections’ offices listed on page 7, or download and print an absentee ballot application from the BOE’s Web site, www.vote.nyc.ny.us. Fill out the application and mail it or deliver it in person to the BOE office in your borough. For the general election on November 4, 2003, completed absentee ballot applications must be postmarked by October 28, 2003, or must be personally delivered to the BOE office by 5:00 p.m. on November 3, 2003.
- 2. Send in your Absentee Ballot. If you submit your absentee ballot application in person at your Board of Elections borough office, you will receive your absentee ballot immediately. You can also have it mailed to you. Fill it out and mail or hand deliver it to any of the BOE’s offices. For the general election, completed absentee ballots must be postmarked by November 3, 2003 or personally delivered to the BOE’s office in your borough by 9:00 p.m. on November 4, 2003.

How can I get more information?

The Board of Elections has a toll-free voter assistance telephone number to answer questions from voters. To learn more about voting in this election, call 866-VOTE-NYC (866-868-3692), or, for the hearing impaired, (212) 487-5496. There is also information available on the BOE’s Web site, www.vote.nyc.ny.us.

The Voter Assistance Commission is a nonpartisan government agency created to encourage more New Yorkers to register and to vote. The Commission identifies historically underrepresented groups and works with other public agencies, private groups, and community-based organizations to encourage registration and voting. The Commission holds an annual public hearing after the general election to learn about experiences with voting in New York City and to make recommendations for improvements. The Commission also holds public meetings prior to the general election to discuss other voting issues. To find out when the annual public hearing will be held or to get more information, call (212) 788-8384. You can also write to the Voter Assistance Commission, 100 Gold Street, 2nd floor, New York, NY 10038, or visit its Web site at www.ci.nyc.ny.us/voter.

The Campaign Finance Board’s Web site, www.nyccfb.info, has an online Voter Guide including a “find your Council district” feature and a searchable database with up-to-date contribution, expenditure, and other campaign finance information on candidates participating in the Campaign Finance Program.

How to Use the Voting Machine

1 Separate the voting machine curtains and enter. (The curtains will be closed when you enter and will stay closed.)

2 Pull the large red handle to the right. Do not move the large red handle again until you finish making all your choices for candidates and for each ballot proposal.

3 Push down the lever next to each candidate you want and next to “yes” or “no” for each ballot proposal. An “X” will appear in the box next to your choice. If you make a mistake, push the lever back and choose the correct lever.

4 When you finish choosing your candidates and voting yes or no on each ballot proposal, leave the levers down, and pull the large red handle all the way to the left. The levers will return to their original positions, and your vote will be counted. Leave the booth through the closed curtains.

A Note About Writing In Candidates' Names:

For most offices, you may vote for a candidate whose name does not appear on the ballot (a “write-in” candidate). First, check with the election workers at your polling place. If you can write in a candidate, find the button above the column of the numbered slots all the way to the left of the voting machine. Push the button and, while holding it in, open the slot opposite the office for which you wish to write in a candidate’s name. In the slot, write in the name of the candidate you want. A pencil is provided inside the voting machine on the left. Cast your vote for other offices in the usual way. For further information, call 866-VOTE-NYC.

NYC’s Campaign Finance Program

New York City’s Campaign Finance Program (the “Program”), established in 1988, helps people run for the offices of mayor, public advocate, comptroller, borough president, and City Council member without relying on large campaign contributions by giving them the opportunity to qualify for matching funds to help them run competitive campaigns. The voluntary Program is administered by the New York City Campaign Finance Board, the independent, nonpartisan City agency that produced this Voter Guide.

When candidates join the Program, they agree to abide by campaign contribution and spending limits and other requirements, including audits of their campaigns. Candidates who join the Program cannot accept contributions from corporations. In return, these candidates can qualify to receive public funds that match contributions received from NYC residents at a rate of $4 to every $1 for contributions of up to $250. The Program’s contribution limits prevent participants from running campaigns with large amounts of money from just a few wealthy people or groups. The Program’s spending limits help ensure that candidates who are wealthy, or who have the support of wealthy people or groups, do not have an unfair advantage.

Program participants file detailed information with the Board about their contributors and how campaign money is spent. The Board computerizes this information, so it is easy for the public and the press to find out the details of candidates’ campaign finances. This information is available (and searchable) on the CFB’s Web site, www.nyccfb.info, and on a public computer terminal at the CFB’s offices. Program participants are audited by the CFB to make sure that they are observing the contribution and spending limits and other Program requirements.

When you read this Voter Guide, you will be able to find out which candidates have joined the Campaign Finance Program for the 2003 elections by looking at the bottom of their candidate statements for the phrase “Participating in the NYC Campaign Finance Program.”

If you are interested in running for City office, or in learning more about how the Campaign Finance Program is helping to make local elections in New York more open and democratic, please contact the CFB at:

The Candidates

This section begins with a list, “Candidates at a Glance,” of the candidates who appeared at press time to be on the general election ballot for the office of City Council member in your area. After that list, you will see pages with candidate profiles and photos. The information and the photos on these pages were given to the CFB by the candidates. The candidates have signed sworn statements that the information in their profiles is true to the best of their knowledge.

The profiles provided by the candidates are reprinted by the CFB as supplied by the candidates. The CFB does not edit the information submitted by the candidates. All candidates have the same deadlines to submit statements and do not have the opportunity to respond to their opponents’ statements.

“Candidates at a Glance” and the candidate profiles may show that candidates are running on more than one party line. The profiles of these candidates will only appear once in this Guide, in the order their names are expected to first appear on the ballot. Please pay careful attention to the “Candidates at a Glance” listing to see the names of all the candidates in each race and which lines they are running on. Even candidates who did not submit profiles to the CFB, or did not submit profiles in time to be included in the Guide, are listed in “Candidates at a Glance,” with an asterisk next to their names to indicate that they did not submit profiles.

The views expressed in the candidate statements do not represent those of the New York City Campaign Finance Board.

39th City Council District

Democratic
Working Families

Bill de Blasio

Party Enrolled In: Democrat

Occupation: New York City Council Member

Occupational Background: Campaign Manager, Hillary Rodham Clinton for U.S. Senate; New York & New Jersey Regional Director, U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development

Educational Background: M.A. Columbia University School of International & Public Affairs; B.A. New York University College of Arts & Sciences

Organizational Affiliations: N/A

Prior Public Experience: School Board Member, Community School Board 15

Bill de Blasio is fighting to improve education and expand childcare and he's gotten results. Last year, Bill helped lead the successful fight to protect education funding, keeping tens of millions of dollars in the classroom where they belong. On the City Council, Bill secured funds to invest in new computer equipment for our neighborhood schools, and he's fighting to ensure that parents voices are heard in how our schools are run. Bill also fought to expand child care for low income, working families by securing $24 million to create 3,000 new child care slots.

Bill de Blasio is working to keep our community safe and secure. He led the fight against closing eight firehouses including Engine 204 in Cobble Hill and Engine 278 serving Borough Park, and he'll keep fighting until they're re-opened. Bill is a leader on the Council in working to protect women from domestic violence. He wrote a new law that ensures women seeking protection from abusers will have quicker access to safe shelters and guarantees that no woman will be turned away from an emergency shelter due to lack of documentation.

Bill is fighting to keep the character of our Brooklyn neighborhoods strong and to improve our quality of life. He provided the funding to jumpstart the cleanup and revitalization of the largest unused property in Carroll Gardens, Public Place. This once blighted site will one day develop into a welcome part of our community. Bill de Blasio has also added more sanitation pickups for shopping areas in our neighborhoods, including 7th Avenue in Park Slope and Church Avenue in Kensington. And Bill funded the cleanup and de-icing of the Greenwood Avenue Footbridge and two other major highway overpasses in Windsor Terrace.

Bill de Blasio is fighting for our community and getting results. Please vote to re-elect Council Member Bill de Blasio to the City Council.

39th City Council District

Green - No to War!

Gloria Mattera

Party Enrolled In: Green Party

Occupation: Director of Child Life and Developmental Services at Bellevue Hospital Center

Occupational Background: Special Education Teacher

Educational Background: MS Special Ed. & M. Ed. Supervision/Admin - Bank Street College of Education

Organizational Affiliations: Executive Board of NY Physicians for a National Health Program; Brooklyn Parents For Peace; Women's International League for Peace and Freedom

Prior Public Experience: City Council candidate 2001

If you marched against war, prayed to stop the war, or feel lied to by your government about the war - now you can register a clear vote: No to War! Bring the troops home now!

War is a local issue. The billions of dollars spent every week on the occupation of Iraq should instead be spent on education, improving public health, protecting our environment and enriching our cultural life.

My campaign also seeks to highlight what's happening here at home. September 11 should have been a moment when New York began to reinvent itself but - shamefully - we remain the most unequal state in the union. Since 1992, the State has lost $11 billion each year as a result of tax breaks that mainly benefited the well off, and the City has lost $4 billion each year for the same reason.

The City needs more revenue to ease it's budget problems. Therefore I support higher taxes on corporations and the very rich, the reintroduction of the stock transfer tax, and for making wealthy tax-exempt private universities and foundations pay for the services they use.

The Council's power to generate revenue, however, is limited. But a united Council can help mobilize people in a way that can build considerable pressure for change. We need a mass street-level campaign to pressure the Federal government to deliver on its post-9/11 aid promises.

I encourage you to become involved in my campaign and to join the Green Party, which is the only viable national third party that's free of corporate money and influence.

Participating in the NYC Campaign Finance Program.

40th City Council District

Democratic
Working Families

Yvette D. Clarke

Party Enrolled In: Democrat

Occupation: Member of the New York City Council for the 40th District, Kings County, Brooklyn

Occupational Background: Director of Business Development, Bronx Overall Business Development Corporation

Educational Background: Bachelor of Arts, Oberlin College, Ohio

Organizational Affiliations: Member, Caribbean - American Chamber of Commerce & Industry; Executive Committee Member - Progressive Democrats Political Association; Chair, Women's Caucus of the City Council; Member - Black and Latino Caucus of the City Council

Prior Public Experience: Executive Assistant - Assemblywoman Barbra Clark of Queens; Director of Youth Programs for the Hospital League/1199 Training and Upgrading Fund

Serving the people of the 40th Council District has been a distinct honor for me since I come from a family with a long history of commitment to public service. I believe that the confidence placed in me by the voters is not misplaced, and that I have been “Their Voice” at the City Council.

Community service, activism, and working to improve the quality of life of all the residents of the 40th District forms the basis for my work at the City Council. In this new term I intend to pay due diligence to all those things that impact our community and to work with my colleagues to make sure that Brooklyn, and in particular the 40th District, get their fair share of the City's economic pie.

We live in tough financial times. But it is only by tapping into the creative energies of all the people who live in my district that we can collectively come up with solutions to ease the pain that is bound to come with the cuts to the city's budget. That is why I have formed an HIV/AIDS Task Force that takes aim at a disease that is ravaging our community. It is the reason for my Sanitation Task Force, the 40th District Youth Task Force, and the 40th District Ad Hoc Clergy Committee - all set up to deal with the various problems in my district.

I am committed to serve my community with honor and integrity. For me, public office is nothing more than living the trust that the community has placed in me. I will not disappoint you.

Tracy L. Boyland

Party Enrolled In: Democrat
Occupation: New York City Council Member
Occupational Background: New York City School Teacher
Educational Background: B.A. in Political Science at Morgan State University, M.A. in Education at Adelphi University
Organizational Affiliations: Wayside Baptist Church, NAACP & Morgan State University Alumni
Prior Public Experience: Intern, Congressman Major R. Owens & Congressman Edolphus "Ed" Towns, Legislative Assistant to the Congressional Black Caucus and Liaison for former New York City Mayor David N. Dinkins in Washington D.C.

Council Member Tracy L. Boyland was born in the Oceanhill/Brownsville section of Brooklyn to former Assemblyman William F. Boyland and Rudy Jean Barnes. She learned the value of community involvement and the importance of voting at a very early age. Upon her return to New York City, Council Member Boyland maintained her desire to serve the community as a teacher in the New York City Public School. As a school Teacher, Council Member Boyland was elected to serve as the United Federation of Teacher as the Chapter Chairperson of School District 23.

In September of 1997, she was elected by a overwhelming margin to the New York City Council for the 41st District. As a Council Member, Council Member Boyland served on a number of committee including the Finance committee and she currently chairs the Women's Issues committee.

Council Member Boyland is a tireless advocate for funding to her schools as she believes that education and computer training is essential. Furthermore, Council Member Boyland develop over 1200 units of affordable housing within her district.

Council Member Boyland clearly understands the importance of building coalitions with those who are working on solutions to the community's problems, leaving our community better off that it was before her arrival.

Charles Barron

Party Enrolled In: Democrat

Occupation: City Council Member

Occupational Background: Local and national activism and leadership development/training through Dynamics of Leadership, Inc. for over 20 years

Educational Background: Councilman Barron holds a B.A. from Hunter College. He is married to Inez. They have 2 sons

Organizational Affiliations: Operation POWER, Bd Member Forbell Men's Shelter

Prior Public Experience: As a first term member of the City Council, Councilman Barron continues to build upon his 35 year history of service, which includes serving on the Steering Committee of the "I Have A Dream" 20th Anniversary March; the Chaney-Goodman-Schwerner Memorial; and National Black United Front

Councilman Barron is Chair of the Higher Education Committee, which oversees City University of NY (CUNY) and he is a member of committees for Land Use; Women's Issues; Consumer Affairs; Landmarks, Public Siting & Maritime Uses. Councilman Barron has secured over $2,000,000 for programs for his constituents, including renovations for Linden/Gershwin Park, Stone Ave. Library, Senior Citizen Centers; and services for Tenant Associations and Youth Programs. Councilman Barron successfully fought to restore $10,000,000 to the CUNY budget and secured funds for TAP, SEEK, College Discovery, Meals on Wheels, and substantial funding for Medgar Evers College and its community education programs.

Councilman Barron has sponsored legislation which prohibits the City from engaging in business with financial institutions which engage in predatory lending practices; supported legislation which requires a "living wage" and co-sponsored legislation which provides for education and training for public assistance recipients.

New housing is being developed throughout the district and a new State of the Art Community Center is slated to be constructed in the Linden Houses.

An effective constituent services program provides residents with ongoing communication with the Councilman.

Councilman Barron is committed to using his integrity, intelligence and dedication to maintaining the fight for the economic development of his community, the delivery of goods and services to his constituents, and the creation of progressive legislation for New York City.

I am running to help restore integrity and accountability to the Council.

Our City is at a crossroads. We can continue the progress that was made during the Giuliani era, or we can return to the time when crime rates were high, public services were poor, and “for sale” signs dominated our neighborhood. I want to be in the Council to help maintain our quality of life.

I am convinced that the vast majority of the present Council does not share our values. They have chosen to raise taxes during an economic downturn. This will not stimulate the economy. Instead, many of us will again shop in New Jersey, and in some cases, move there.

For five years our community was well represented by Marty Golden in the Council. He made sure that our voices were heard at City Hall. His replacement in the Council has failed to represent our community’s interests. Instead, he has gone along with the tax and spend City Council leadership. We need a Councilmember who will stand up for us.

We also need someone who we can trust. Vincent Gentile made opposing tax increases his campaign theme. Yet, his first major votes in the Council were to raise taxes. He said one thing to get elected-and then did the opposite.

This is not his first flip flop. As State Senator he took conflicting positions on major issues. As Councilman, he attacks a rent law he backed in the Senate. When I’m in the Council you’ll know where I stand.

I seek re-election as your City Councilman so that I can continue serving the needs of the community as an elected official, first as a State Senator and now as a City Councilman. I continue to speak out against the property tax hike that was leveled against our community, as my campaign earlier this year invigorated the outer borough communities such as ours to tell City Hall that property tax hikes are devastating. The families living in the communities of Bay Ridge, Bensonhurst, Dyker Heights, and Bath Beach expect their elected officials to be constituent minded, visible in the community, and to maintain a constituent services staff dedicated to helping people. I have lived my entire life in this community, and I will soon be approaching my 20th year of public service, first as a prosecutor and then as an elected official. My experience in this arena has qualified me over the years to be able to seek solutions to the issues that come before us as a community. As a Councilman, I have steered funding to our community to areas and programs that are in the most need of help. In my few months on the Council, I have held community forums on issues that are critical to my constituents such as rent protection laws, preservation issues, and saving ferry service to Manhattan. When I confront a tough vote in the Council, I always carefully consider how my constituents would be affected, especially if funding was cut for the services they rely on. I have only been on the Council a few months but in that time I have been able to step up and give the Bay Ridge, Bensonhurst, Dyker Heights, and Bath Beach the voice and advocacy they need and deserve at City Hall. If I can be of any assistance to you I encourage you to visit my district office at 8703 3rd Avenue in Bay Ridge or just give us a call at 718-748-5200. I am proud to serve you and I hope that you will continue to rely on my record of public service and paying attention to the needs of my constituency.

Occupation: New York City Council Member (Brooklyn - 44th District)

Occupational Background: Certified Public Accountant

Educational Background: MBA, Baruch College; BS, Touro College

Organizational Affiliations: Council of Neighborhood Organizations, Guardians of the Sick, Mothers and Fathers Alliance Saving Kids, Ohel Children's Home, United New York Democratic Club, Voluntary Community Civilian Patrol, YMHA Senior Citizen Center

Prior Public Experience: Chief of Staff to Assemblyman Dov Hikind; Auditor, New York City Department of Finance; City Council Legislative Liaison, Comptroller Alan Hevesi

Councilman Simcha Felder was elected in 2001 to represent the 44th District in Brooklyn, comprising sections of Midwood, Borough Park, Bensonhurst and Ditmas Park.

Felder was born, raised, and educated in the Midwood-Borough Park area, where he currently resides with his wife, Elana, and their four children. He received a Bachelor of Science degree in Accounting from Touro College and an MBA from Baruch College. Felder is a Professor of Management at Brooklyn College and the only Certified Public Accountant in the New York City Council.

With two decades of public service experience, Felder understands how to navigate the city bureaucracy; he has a proven record of getting things done. During his first two years in the Council, Felder was able to permanently suspended alternate side parking for the Purim holiday, reroute sanitation pickups during the morning rush hour, and save school nurse positions at private schools.

Despite a difficult economy, Felder has negotiated millions of dollars in additional funds for the community. He has secured $1.5 million to improve McDonald Avenue and eliminate the old trolley tracks, and he has increased funding for several senior programs in the 44th district.

Felder will continue the fight to keep crime rates down, build affordable housing, and end the City's fiscal crisis. Felder's professional experience and educational background, combined with his passion for helping others, make him uniquely qualified to serve the community.

Occupation: Podiatrist

Occupational Background: Podiatry

Educational Background: Certificate in Computer Programming, Bachelor of Science from City College of New York, Doctor of Podiatry from New York College of Podiatric Medicine

Organizational Affiliations: New Era

Prior Public Experience: 58th AD District Leader

Councilman Stewart put his successful medical practice on hold when you elected him to represent you in the City Council. His performance has been outstanding. He is on seven committees. He never misses a meeting because he wants to be there when the pie is cut, to get our community's share. He helped hundreds get apartments, jobs, scholarships, citizenships, etc. He met with every principal, Senior Center, PTA, Community Board, precinct commander and many Commissioners. He visited all churches and met with almost all CBO directors, block Associations and is available to all constituents.

He secured funds for dozens of organizations and millions of dollars for Brooklyn College, parks, schools, seniors, streets, etc. He replaced every dollar that was cut before he took office.

He said NO to 25% tax increase, No to closing firehouses and Senior Centers, NO to cutting Pre-K, No to laying off low and middle income workers, No to dirty streets, NO to cutting library hours. He presents ways of cutting waste and saving essential services. He fights to bring every hidden dollar home to provide better services.

Councilman Stewart's goals include putting a computer in every student's home, afterschool programs in every school, more available mammogram, loans to small businesses, multi-service and youth center, health insurance for all, more summer jobs for youth.

Councilman Stewart is not afraid to make tough decisions for his constituents. He will work with Speaker Miller, Councilmembers, the Mayor, the Governor, Congressmembers, Senators, banks, companies, organizations, Assemblymembers, block associations and individuals to look for ways to bring more funds and services. He fights hard so that the youth will have the opportunity to achieve the same success that he has.

Keep Councilman Stewart fighting for you. With your support, he can make the 45th District as good as any other.

Prior Public Experience: COMMUNITY SCHOOL BOARD MEMBER - DISTRICT 22

The daughter of Holocaust survivors, Brooklyn born and bred, I have spent most of my life in this splendid borough, raised a family in Flatbush, intensely involved in my son's educational life and school district. I have written, pro bono, a total of $253,000 in successful grant proposals, bringing computers, arts training, staff development and a schoolyard to my school district. Mill Basin's Environmental Study Center received $10,000 from Keyspan for staff development from my efforts. In 1999, I became a Community School Board Member.

Councilwoman in the 46th District will be a natural extension of my activities. I pride myself on relentlessly pursuing what's best for those around me, whether it's family, neighborhood or the educational community. I personally chased drug dealers from my building, worked with the 63rd Police Precinct to rid my neighborhood of a drug house, initiated our Tenants Association to ensure stability of services in our building and spearheaded a successful campaign to place a traffic light on East 26th Street and Avenue L at my son's school. Undaunted by the School Construction Authority, I led a parent coalition at P.S. 193 when the Authority inevitably botched a schoolyard repaving project. Potholes are regularly fixed in my neighborhood because of my persistence. Seeing things through to the bitter end and maximizing the strengths of those around me are my strong points.

Councilwoman will be the only hat I wear while in office. My constituents deserve, now more than ever, 24/7 from me and my staff. As your Councilwoman I will dedicate myself to getting the most out of your tax dollars (which are now unendurably high). Of particular importance to me is parent concern for their children's success in the workplace. Quality of life issues will come under my close scrutiny and your relevant thoughts and suggestions will be welcome.

Prior Public Experience: 41st Assembly District Leader; Community Board 17 Chair

Within his first days in office, Fidler was unanimously elected to Chair the Brooklyn City Council Delegation and selected by the Speaker to Chair the Youth Services Committee. It didn't take him long to put these positions to work for his constituency, spearheading the fight to restore weekend hours for the Brooklyn Public Libraries.

He then won the largest education budget restoration of any Member in the City. From a much needed school air conditioning system in Gerritsen Beach and added school security systems in Canarsie and Mill Basin to school library expansions in Bergen Beach and Canarsie and computer labs and laptops in Mill Island, Canarsie, Marine Park and Sheepshead Bay, he led the fight to restore $2.35 million for school capital projects in his district.

He restored school crossing guards, municipal ambulance services and senior citizen weekend meals, and helped maintain bi-weekly sanitation pick-up in Brooklyn.

Fidler successfully fought the Mayor to keep both the JASA Canarsie and Abe Stark Senior Centers open, and achieved the restoration of the Summer Youth Employment Program, ensuring 40,000 summer jobs for our City's youth.

He obtained an anti-graffiti program in Gerritsen Beach, a new youth center in Canarsie, an additional new civic youth program in Canarsie, continued youth programs in Bergen Beach, a Greenstreets restoration of Fraser Square, an electrical upgrade of the Mill Basin library and handball courts in Marine Park.

In his second term, Fidler intends to achieve the complete restoration of Canarsie Park and further the Avenue L Task Force he created to help revitalize business on the commercial strip.

Politicians are never hesitant to speak of “traditional family values”. What do we really mean by values and why do they matter? I believe myself blessed to have had the privilege of growing up in a home possessed of these values. My very first job was shining shoes in my father’s barber shop in Coney Island. And I learned my first life lesson there: True ‘self-esteem’ comes from achievement, no matter how modest it may be.

My formal education was delivered by master teachers, first at Brooklyn Preparatory High School and then Fordham University, both then prestigious Jesuit institutions...back when the Jesuits were still Catholic! I went on to teach in the NYC public school system for 34 years where I was twice bestowed the honor of ‘Teacher of the Year’ for then District 23 in Brownsville. The last several years I worked in the district as a Curriculum and Staff Developer, helping less experienced teachers better serve their students.

I was attracted to the Conservative Party from the very beginning. It is genuinely serious about changing the policies that are quite literally destroying the traditional family. Why should the awarding of welfare benefits, for example, penalize a two parent family that is trying to stay together? Does our present tax code truly reflect a genuine commitment to the family? Did you know that the deadly AIDS virus is small enough to pass through a condom? Our kids need to be told and taught the truth!

I have space enough to conclude with a quote from the mission statement of my party: “A material society bankrupt of morals, culture, values, and simple human decency will not prosper. If we do not teach our children the value of family, work, respect for life, and the fundamental knowledge of the difference between right and wrong, we will leave them with a debt far greater than any monetary burden they will carry for our mistakes.”

Ballot Proposals

Introduction

Ballot proposals are on the ballot for voters to decide. Voters can vote “Yes” or “No.” Ballot proposals are on the right-hand side of the ballot in the voting booth, near the top or bottom corner of the ballot.

In the general election this year, New York City voters will be asked to vote on two State ballot proposals, which will be Questions 1 and 2 on the ballot. The official text and summary for the State ballot proposals follow this introduction. New York City voters will also be asked to vote on three local ballot proposals placed on the ballot by the 2003 Charter Revision Commission, which will be Questions 3, 4, and 5 on the ballot. Turn to page 35 for extensive coverage of the three local ballot proposals you will be voting on in this election.

State Ballot Proposals

Question 1: Exclusion of Indebtedness Contracted for Sewage Facilities

Official Text

The proposed amendment to Article 8, section 5 of the Constitution would extend for ten years, until January 1, 2014, the authority of counties, cities, towns and villages to exclude from their constitutional debt limits indebtedness contracted for the construction or reconstruction of sewage facilities. Shall the proposed amendment be approved?

Official Summary

The purpose of the proposed amendment is to continue the authority of counties, cities, towns, and villages to exclude from their constitutional debt limits indebtedness incurred for the construction or reconstruction of sewage facilities. The State Constitution currently provides that indebtedness contracted on or after January 1, 1962 and before January 1, 2004, for the construction or reconstruction of facilities for the conveyance, treatment, and disposal of sewage shall be excluded from the constitutional debt limits of counties, cities, towns and villages. The effect of the proposed amendment would be to extend for ten years, until January 1, 2014, the period during which sewer debt shall be excluded from the constitutional debt limits of counties, cities, towns and villages.

Question 2: Elimination of Small City School Districts from Constitutional Debt Limitations

Official Text

The proposed amendment to Article 8, section 4 of the Constitution would eliminate School districts that are coterminous with, or partly within, or wholly within a city having less than one hundred twenty-five thousand inhabitants, from the entities subject to a general constitutional debt limitation. Shall the proposed amendment be approved?

Official Summary

The purpose of the proposed amendment is to eliminate school districts coterminous with, or partly within, or wholly within, a city having less than one hundred twenty-five thousand inhabitants, from general constitutional debt limitations.

The State Constitution currently provides that these small city school districts are not allowed to contract indebtedness for education purposes that would exceed an amount equal to five percent of the average full valuation of taxable real estate in the school district. This limitation may be exceeded in relation to specified projects with voter approval, and the consent of the Regents of the University of the State of New York and the State Comptroller. Similar constitutional debt limitations are currently provided for counties, cities, towns and villages, but no other school districts. School districts are currently subject to a statutory debt limitation of ten percent of full valuation of taxable real property in the school district. The proposed amendment would eliminate the constitutional debt limitation applicable to small city school districts.

New York City Ballot Proposals

NYC Ballot Proposals

City Ballot Proposals

Introduction

In this election, in addition to the two State ballot questions, there are three important City ballot proposals for voters to decide. These proposals have been put forward by the Charter Revision Commission, a governmental body appointed by the Mayor earlier this year to consider changes to the City Charter. The Commission held public meetings and hearings, and has published reports on its work. Transcripts of the meetings and hearings, and copies of the reports, are available from the Commission at (212) 676-2060 and on their Web site, www.nyc.gov/html/charter/home.html.

Each of the three proposals covers a different subject: City elections (pages 37–55), City purchasing (pages 56–58), and government reorganization (pages 58–61). For each proposal, the following information is provided in this section of the Guide:

1. The official text and summary (prepared by the Charter Revision Commission);
2. Highlights of major pro and con arguments (prepared by the Campaign Finance Board); and
3. Pro and con statements submitted by the public (which were edited for space by the CFB). The statements from the Charter Revision Commission members (both pro and con) are presented first, followed by statements from organizations and individuals in alphabetical order.

The highlights of the major pro and con arguments are based on statements made by different groups and individuals at public hearings, in the press, and in submissions to the Campaign Finance Board. These highlights and the pro and con statements submitted by the public and reprinted in this Guide do not in any way represent the views of the Campaign Finance Board, which takes no position for or against these ballot proposals.

The arguments presented in this section may not represent all possible arguments for or against each proposal. The CFB urges you to follow the public debate on each proposal, and not to rely only on the information presented in this Guide, so that you can make informed decisions on election day.

The full text of all statements submitted by the public is available on the CFB's Web site, www.nycfb.info.

DEMOCRACY DOESN'T WORK WITHOUT YOU.

Question 3: City Elections

Official Text

This proposal would amend the City Charter to establish a new system of city elections for the offices of Mayor, Public Advocate, Comptroller, Borough President, and Council member. The September primary election would be open to all voters and all candidates, regardless of party membership or independent status. The top two vote getters would compete in the November general election. In both elections, candidates could indicate their party membership or independent status on the ballot. Candidates participating in the voluntary campaign finance program, which provides public campaign funding, could not accept contributions from political parties or party committees. The new system would replace the current system of political party nominations through primary elections in which only party members may vote. The changes would take effect after the 2005 Citywide election. Shall this proposal be adopted?

Official Summary (prepared by the Charter Revision Commission)

This proposal would make changes to the way the City conducts its elections for the offices of Mayor, Public Advocate, Comptroller, Borough President, and City Council Member. The proposal would provide for a single September primary election open to all eligible voters and candidates, and the top two vote getters in that election would compete in the November general election. The changes would take effect after the 2005 citywide election and apply to all elections, including special elections to fill vacancies in office.

How it Works — Currently, candidates who are running for elected office compete against each other in party primary elections (followed in certain instances by runoff primaries). In these elections, which are held in September, each party's members cast ballots to decide the general election nominee of that party. Candidates may also be nominated for the general election through an independent nominating petition process. Under the proposed system, all candidates for an office would run against each other in the September primary election. Voters would be eligible to vote for any candidate, including a candidate who belongs to a different political party or is registered as an independent. Only the top two finishers in the primary election, regardless of their party or independent registration status, would compete in the November general election.

Who is Eligible to Vote — Currently, only registered voters who are enrolled in political parties may vote in primary elections. Voters registered as independents cannot participate until the general election. Under the proposed system, all voters, including independent voters not enrolled in any party, would be eligible to participate in the primary election.

Ballot Access — Currently, registered voters who carry or sign a petition to place a candidate on the ballot generally must be enrolled in the same party as the candidate petitioning to get on the ballot. Under the proposed system, all eligible registered voters, regardless of their party enrollment or independent status, would be permitted to carry and sign a petition to place a candidate on the ballot. In addition, the maximum number of petition signatures required would generally be the same maximum number that is currently provided for candidates to be placed on the primary election ballot. The new signature requirements would also apply to candidates in special elections to fill vacancies.

The Ballot — Currently, the ballot lists a candidate’s party affiliation. Under the proposed system, candidates would be permitted, but not required, to list their party registration or independent status on the ballot.

Political Party Campaign Contributions — Currently, all candidates, including those who participate in the City’s voluntary campaign finance program, which provides money from the City treasury to help fund candidates’ campaigns, are permitted to accept campaign contributions from political parties, up to specified limits, but candidates may not accept contributions from corporations or unregistered political committees. Under the proposed system, candidates who participate in the campaign finance program would also be prohibited from accepting campaign contributions from political parties. In addition, the Campaign Finance Board would have the authority to address party expenditures in relation to candidates participating in the City’s campaign finance program in order to protect the contribution and spending limits of the program under the new system of elections.

Voter Guide — Currently, all candidates may place biographical summaries, campaign information, and a picture of themselves in the printed Voter Guide. This proposal would create a video Voter Guide that broadcasts candidates making brief statements on a municipal cable television channel.

Vacancies in Nominations — Currently, if a candidate dies or a nomination otherwise becomes vacant, the candidate’s committee to fill vacancies generally chooses a successor to run in his or her place, if time allows. Under the new system, the next eligible top vote getter in the primary election could fill the vacancy and advance to the general election accordingly. If the vacancy could not be filled in that manner, then a committee to fill vacancies would fill it.

Pro and Con Arguments (prepared by the Campaign Finance Board)

PRO: The Charter Revision Commission conducted an open and thorough review. It held several public meetings in each borough, had among its members highly qualified civic leaders representing varied backgrounds, and operated in a fair and independent manner to come up with a proposal to increase voter and candidate participation in the electoral process, especially among racial and political groups whose participation has been limited.

CON: The Commission, as chosen by the Mayor, did not fairly or independently study the issues. The Chair of the Commission announced that certain changes to the City’s election process would be placed on the ballot before the Commission members had a chance to study the issues. The Commission has failed to demonstrate that the current system is inadequate, and in fact, the proposal might decrease voter turnout, decrease opportunities for minorities and small party candidates, and increase the role of money and celebrity in elections.

PRO: Most major U.S. cities, including Los Angeles, Boston, and Chicago, hold nonpartisan elections. New York City already provides for nonpartisan special elections to fill vacancies in the offices of Mayor, Public Advocate, Comptroller, Borough President, and City Council Member. Although the Commission’s proposal permits party labels for candidates on the ballot and is therefore not the same as a strictly “nonpartisan” election, it is similar in that it eliminates party primaries.

CON: Most major cities are not comparable to New York City and have different political cultures and political histories. Jacksonville, Minneapolis, and New Orleans are the only major U.S. cities that have election systems comparable to the Commission’s proposal. Even in cities that have experience with nonpartisan elections, evidence is inconclusive about achieving the stated goals of the Commission.

PRO: The Democratic Party dominates New York City politics, so the Democratic Party primary often determines who wins the general election. Voters not enrolled in this party currently are disenfranchised because they cannot vote in the Democratic primary elections. The Commission’s proposal, by permitting all voters to vote in the primary elections, will enfranchise these voters and increase voter turnout.

CON: No New York City voter is “disenfranchised.” Any voter can choose to be enrolled in a party and exercise the right to participate in that party’s primary. There is no evidence that voter turnout will increase in New York City because of the proposed change.

PRO: Partisan primaries need to be eliminated to open up the political system to candidates who are not enrolled in the dominant party, which will result in more competitive primary elections and a better crop of candidates.

CON: Party primaries are already competitive and yield good candidates, and are open to any candidate who wants to compete as long as the candidate is enrolled in the party. Moreover, third parties will have less impact on elections because third party candidates will not likely make it to the general election and will not be able to participate in “fusion” tickets.

PRO: The system proposed will open up the process in ways that will involve more minority voters and candidates in local elections. Many minority voters are not enrolled in a party.

CON: Minorities are established forces within the parties, and benefit from the current system. Changing the role of parties will negatively affect the ability of minorities and the less affluent to have their voices heard.

PRO: The Commission’s proposal will dilute the power of party bosses by putting the focus on the candidate, not the party. This will foster a diversity of viewpoints, giving voters more choices.

CON: The proposal will increase the power of party bosses by depriving party members of the ability to choose the party’s candidate. The proposal will also produce fewer well-defined candidates.

PRO: The Commission’s proposal, by reducing the role of parties and forcing candidates to appeal to the broad spectrum of voters — as opposed to the party leadership — will moderate the political positions of candidates, reward coalition builders as opposed to party regulars, and make candidates more accountable to the voters.

CON: Parties are important. They put forward agendas; recruit, train, and support candidates; and mobilize voters. They also force candidates to take stands, serve as a moderating force against extremism, and build coalitions.

PRO: The Commission’s proposal bans contributions from parties to candidates and would effectively control “soft” party spending by mandating that the Campaign Finance Board adopt new rules linking party spending to specific candidates. The Campaign Finance Program would be protected.

CON: The proposal could impair New York City’s successful campaign finance reform program by allowing parties to spend unlimited amounts of “soft” party money on preferred candidates. There is no Constitutional way to control “soft” money in the context of nonpartisan elections.

PRO: Most municipal functions, such as garbage collection or mass transit, are not partisan issues, so the City’s elected officials who make these policies should not be elected in a partisan manner.

CON: All issues of municipal government can involve judgments that reflect policy considerations, including political issues that are addressed in different ways by the different parties.

PRO: Because candidates will not necessarily indicate their party affiliation on the ballot, voters will be forced to pay more attention to candidates and issues, creating a more informed electorate.

CON: If candidates do not indicate their party on the ballot, some voters will be confused, and others may base their decisions on race, ethnicity, or name recognition alone. Increasing the importance of name recognition benefits incumbents and wealthy or celebrity candidates.

PRO: More competitive elections will reduce cases of “voter roll-off.” Voters who cast votes for candidates for the offices at the top of the ballot (such as Governor or Mayor) would be more likely to vote for candidates for local offices (such as City Council).

CON: If candidates do not list party affiliation on the ballot, “voter roll-off” will increase because voters will have less information about the candidates and will only vote for candidates (such as Governor) who will continue to be listed by party.

PRO: Nonpartisan elections, in general, have been the subject of public debate for many years, including reviews by the 1998, 1999, 2001, and 2002 Commissions. The Commission members had ample time and opportunity to study the issues, and crafted a unique new system of city elections, reflecting concerns about adopting a strictly “nonpartisan” system.

CON: The likely impact of the Commission’s proposal is uncertain, and may have significant negative consequences. The changes proposed by the Commission are significant and complex, and the Commission did not conduct sufficient research on them. The academic research on the effects of eliminating party primaries is inconclusive.

PRO: The voters have had adequate opportunity to study the issues, and no additional research would offer new, relevant information.

CON: The process was rushed. The Commission did little research on the potential impact of its final proposal on changes to the City’s electoral system, which was adopted late in the process, giving inadequate time to witnesses to comment on them and to voters to study them.

Frank J. Macchiarola (Charter Revision Commission Chairman)

New York City is notorious for its corrupt party bosses and the political machines they control. Boss Tweed may be long gone, but his spirit lives on in the City’s politics. In Tweed’s time, and still today, party bosses derive much of their power from their control over the ballot. How can we fight back?

If the Commission’s proposal passes, all voters, regardless of party, will have the opportunity to participate in the City’s primary election. Currently, the Democratic primary decides the election winner in about 95 percent of the City’s races — the mayoral race is the one big exception.

Most voters in New York City, including myself, are Democrats. But there are an awful lot of us who feel that all voters, and not just a small group of party members, should have the opportunity to cast meaningful votes.

To achieve this, the Commission on which I served has made a simple proposal: every registered voter, including independents, would be eligible to participate in the primary election.

Let’s bury Boss Tweed, for good.

Patricia L. Gatling (Charter Revision Commission)

Today in New York City there are over 1 million registered voters who are ineligible to cast a meaningful vote in the general election held in November. Nearly 15 percent of these voters are African-American or Latino.

They are ineligible to cast a meaningful vote because they are barred from voting in the primary election held in September. The reason that they are barred from voting in the primary is because they exercised their right to be unaffiliated with a political party.

As one of the two African-American members of the Charter Revision Commission, I was surprised to learn that so many members of my community are being left out of the electoral process.

When this subject was brought up, my only concern was whether this change would negatively impact the minority community. In fact, quite the contrary; I have learned that the current party system has a negative impact.

Opponents of non-partisan elections claim that it violates the Voting Rights Act of 1965 when, in fact, it is our current party primary system that may be violative of the Act, since it prevents a large number of African-Americans and Latinos from accessing the system.

Non-partisan elections would open primary voting to all registered voters.

Mohammad S. Khalid (Charter Revision Commission)

After hearing the testimonies of many New Yorkers, I voted for non-partisan elections to be considered by the voters in the November referendum of 2003 for the following reasons:

There is a lack of competition in city elections, because party bosses have more control than voters. In 2001, only 42 of the 51 council races could be considered competitive.

As a member of the minority community, I disagree with the critics who allege that non-partisan elections will disenfranchise the minority community any more than the current system already does. Non-partisan elections will allow more minority candidates and voters to participate in an open and fair system.

There is no doubt that the campaign finance board may have a little difficulty in adjusting their voluntary campaign finance program. The board is already providing the service under the current system. The program can be changed according to the proposed system. The board has authority to make changes as required by law, and laws can be changed. After all, the power lies in a majority of the voters and not in the hands of a few who do not want a change due to a personal agenda.

Michael R. Bloomberg (Mayor)

It is the duty of every government to promote opportunity and participation by tearing down obstacles that stand in its way, to provide services efficiently, and to operate according to the highest ethical standards. This year’s Charter Revision Commission has gone a long way toward promoting these ends.

The proposals to be placed before voters this November will change the way the City does business by reducing the burdensome regulations which frustrate and hamper companies’ efforts to work for the City, while at the same time increasing opportunities for small businesses, particularly those owned by women and minorities. They will bolster the City’s ethics laws by providing enhanced enforcement measures to punish those that violate them. And they will put elections back in the hands of the voters by opening the process to all.

Margaret S. Chin (Deputy Executive Director, Asian Americans for Equality)

As a former candidate for the City Council and a long time community organizer in the Chinese American community, I feel strongly that non-partisan elections will increase voter participation in the Chinese American community.

I have taken part in many voter registration drives in Chinatown. When filling out the voter registration form, when Chinese American voters are asked to “choose a party,” he or she will most likely check the last box “I do not want to enroll in a party.” Many new immigrants are hesitant to be affiliated with a political party because of prior negative experience with parties in their homelands.

In New York City where candidates winning the Democratic primary will most likely win the general election, they will not spend too much time reaching out to the Chinese American community. With non-partisan elections more Chinese American voters will be able to participate in the democratic process and hopefully will begin to gain more clout with their votes.

Harry Kresky (Counsel, New York State Independence Party)

Five Charter Revision Commissions have studied this important reform. Thousands have testified at scores of hearings. Nonpartisan municipal elections are favored by those who do not benefit from the existing partisan political status quo — independents, insurgent Democrats, members of minor parties, and other people interested in public service who are not professional politicians. This is a reform whose time has come.

Most of those testifying against nonpartisan municipal elections are Democrats who hold office. They are the main beneficiaries of the current system, a Democratic Party monopoly in which the winner of the Democratic primary almost always wins in the general election — and few general elections are competitive. In the 2001 general election only 1 of 51 City Council races was classified as “highly competitive” where the margin of victory was less than 5%. The vast majority (82%) were won by landslides — their margins of victory averaged 64%.

Nonpartisan municipal elections would change that. The 1.5 million New Yorkers who cannot now vote in the critical first round, because they are not enrolled Democrats, will be able to fully participate in the entire process of choosing our public officials. The top two vote-getters in round one would compete in a runoff.

Randy Mastro

I write in support of the Commission’s proposal to create non-partisan elections. As a former New York City Deputy Mayor and chair of two such commissions, I had the opportunity to study this very issue.

More than 80% of America’s 50 largest cities now have non-partisan elections for mayor. In Los Angeles, Chicago, Detroit and so many other major cities across this country, non-partisan elections are now the law.

Non-partisan elections are about good government. As one of our greatest mayors, Fiorello LaGuardia, once said, there is no Republican or Democrat way to pick up the garbage. Partisan primaries have disenfranchised hundreds of thousands of independent voters who cannot vote in party primaries, which are often the only truly competitive races in a city still dominated by one political party.

Non-partisan elections are a better way to conduct municipal elections than the partisan system we have now.

John Mooney (Vice Chairman, Station Agent Section, Transport Workers Union, Local 100)

The best and most significant history of the union movement is when unions stand up for all workers and for the community.

In the case of this ballot Proposal, the union bureaucracy is lining up with the Democratic Party bosses to oppose this important change. That might be best for their own narrow interests but it does not serve rank and file members or the community.

The question for the rank and file is — what side are we on? Are we on the side of the ordinary working people of the city or on the side of the union bosses? The working people of New York have diverse political affiliations and many of us are independents who are locked out of meaningful participation in our city elections.

As a union leader I believe we must do what is right and most noble. We must stand for the rights of all working people and all the communities of New York. That’s why I’m supporting the Proposal to change City Elections.

National Latino Officers Association (Anthony Miranda, Executive Chairman)

As someone who has run for public office and experienced firsthand the unfair and wasteful aspects of our current partisan election system, I strongly support a “yes”.

Nonpartisan elections can eliminate the most important “entry barriers” that candidates face when they try to run for office without the help of (or in active opposition to) the party machine.

In partisan elections, access to the ballot is tightly controlled by this machine, which uses New York’s outdated ballot access laws to knock competition off the ballot. The proposal makes getting on the ballot simpler and more democratic.

The Proposal on City Elections also allows all registered voters, in every party and those unaffiliated with a party, to participate in the September and November elections. This means more voters have a say in who is elected, and also means candidates will have to reach out to all constituents, not just “primary” voters. A nonpartisan system makes elections more competitive, and thus encourages more voter participation.

New Era Democrats (John R. Orlando, Vice-President)

As most New Yorkers have seen with the scandalous process of electing county judges, the system gives too much power to parties and not enough to the people. Citywide, there are over 830,000 voters not registered in the two major parties. Voting “YES” on nonpartisan elections would permit all voters to select candidates in primaries as well as the general election. The new election process would force candidates to contact new constituencies and meet with a diverse voter.

The opponents argue a nonpartisan system reduces voter turnout, splinters minority voting power and eliminates parties. Studies of cities with an elected mayor, using nonpartisan elections, prove these accusations wrong. In fact, cities with a nonpartisan system have increased voter turnout and elected minorities in greater percentages. Nonpartisan elections would not eliminate parties, since candidates can opt to place party affiliation on the ballot.

Nonpartisan elections are not a cure for our political woes, but it is one step closer to establishing a more effective election process. Franklin Roosevelt said “the country demands bold, persistent experimentation. It is common sense to take a method and try it. If it fails, admit it frankly and try another. But above all, try something.”

100 Blacks in Law Enforcement Who Care (Eric Adams, Co-Founder)

New York City is embarking upon an opportunity for voters to decide on how elections are held. The current system of choosing candidates is not open to all New Yorkers. A nonpartisan election is not an attempt to disenfranchise minorities or any particular party. It is an opportunity to open up the electoral process. Our system of elections cannot continue to lock out people who do not want to be affiliated with any party.

The men and women in this group are registered as having no party affiliation and therefore are not allowed to carry petitions, vote in primaries, or have a decision in shaping who will be on the ballot during the general election. In some elections they vote for a Democratic candidate and other times they vote for one of the various other party lines based on their individual preference for another candidate’s position.

The Commission’s model addresses these concerns and allows New York to join those other progressive cities that realize that the best election system is that which includes all registrants’ participation in the governmental decision making process.

People’s Coalition for Nonpartisan Municipal Elections

(Lenora B. Fulani, Chair)

I’ve been traveling across the city debating Black and Latino elected officials on this proposition, a reform which opens up elections to more voters and more candidates. The debate always boils down to this: Are the interests of the communities of color equivalent to the interests of the Democratic Party? The Democratic machine and the party bosses say, “Yes.” My answer is “No”!

Black, Latino and Asian people are seeking more diverse political options than ever before. 44% of Black young adults consider themselves independents, not Democrats, but they are shut out under the current system. Growing numbers of Latinos and Asians are becoming independents, too. We must include all independent New Yorkers — there are nearly a million of us — if our political system is to develop along with the actual changes taking place in our communities. This is not a time to lock people out!

Nonpartisan elections open the door to greater minority empowerment. 41% of the 50 largest U.S. cities with nonpartisan elections have elected Black or Latino mayors. All New Yorkers can take advantage of this new system in creative and empowering ways!

Christopher B. Spuches

Last year I ran for State Assembly. I’d been a member of the Democratic Party since I registered to vote. When I attempted to challenge an incumbent in the Democratic Party primary, however, I faced the wrath of the party machine.

The Democratic Party summoned me to a loyalty hearing and I was found not to be “in sympathy with the principles of the Party” — even though I supported the Party’s platform on key issues. The courts, upon the Democratic Party’s recommendation, formally expelled me from the Party.

I became the first person to be expelled from a party in New York County. Consequently, I was barred from running or even voting in the Democratic Party primary. I’m not alone; each year, both parties bounce challengers off primary ballots to protect their preferred candidate. This chilling effect stifles new ideas and leads to stagnant thinking and an inefficient government.

With non-partisan municipal elections, this will no longer happen. The power to nominate candidates will be returned to the people, and away from the backroom politics of political parties. That’s a big win for all New Yorkers.

Staten Island Independence Party (Steven K. Isler)

Is it an election when everyone knows in advance who’s going to win every seat on the City Council, before even one vote is cast?

Oh sure, you can vote for a Council candidate if you want, but it won’t make any difference. Politicians call that democracy. Do you? Or would you prefer a system where every candidate has an exactly equal chance to get on the ballot and your vote might actually make a difference.

Independent candidates need 2,700 signatures to get on the ballot (Democrats need 900), and then they are relegated to the sixth column of the voting machine. Is that fair? And is it any wonder that most sensible people don’t even bother trying? The problem is not that the best candidate doesn’t win; it’s that the best candidates don’t even get on the playing field.

We must restore the power of democracy to the people of New York, as most other cities have done. It’s a matter of fairness, of equal access to the ballot for every citizen, not just the politicians’ favorites.

Your vote for City Council is a wasted vote. But your vote for open elections will count for years to come.

Robert A. Straniere (New York State Assembly)

Fourteen years ago, I first urged the New York City Charter Revision Commission to consider non-partisan city elections.

As with school board elections, candidates for all city offices should be allowed to run on their own qualifications, not some arbitrary political party label. Running city government depends more on one's ability to effectively manage the delivery of municipal services than on one's political ideology.

Non-partisan elections will increase the pool of qualified candidates. It will also save the city from the high cost of expensive, publicly financed primary elections.

I believe that the switch to this method will stimulate the electoral process in a positive way, as more diverse ideas and points of view will be allowed to surface for public debate. Such action can only benefit the public policy-making process.

J. Phillip Thompson (Associate Professor, Massachusetts Institute of Technology)

Electoral reform is needed to increase citizen participation in elections. Arguments that electoral reform will weaken the power of historically disadvantaged communities of color are not supported by evidence from other cities using non-partisan voting systems.

Advances in minority representation in New York in recent decades has consistently followed on the heels of electoral reform. This was true of lawsuits brought against legislative redistricting plans that helped elect minority representatives in Brooklyn; of the lawsuit eliminating the Board of Estimate that led to the election of David Dinkins, the City's only minority mayor; of a reform expanding the size of the City Council in 1991 that resulted in more minority representation; and it was true of term limits that resulted in a more diverse City Council. In each case, electoral reform was vigorously opposed by political incumbents. It is no different today.

Supporting the Commission's proposal does not preclude the pursuit of other important reform proposals — such as same day voter registration and voting rights for non-citizen taxpayers. The proposed reform is a helpful step in addressing a growing disjunction between the rapidly changing city population and electoral bodies that resist change.

Additional "pro" statements were submitted by Bob Armstrong (Manhattan Libertarian, Drug Affairs Director); Susan Cleary (Republican District Leader); Pedro Espada, Jr. (City Council); Fiorello La Guardia Good Government Committee (Nicholas Chahales, President); Martin J. Golden (NY State Senator); Richard E. Green (President, New York City Community Youth Worker); Lawrence D. Littlefield; Olga Mendez (NY State Senator); Gary Popkin; Pat Russo (City Council Candidate); and George Spitz. The full text of all submitted statements can be viewed at www.nycfcb.info.

Bill Lynch (Charter Revision Commission)

As a member of the Charter Revision Commission, I voted against the proposal on changing City Elections. This proposal would eliminate party primaries, a right that voters have had since 1911. The proposed system is a hybrid, free-for-all where multiple candidates from each party run together and optionally list their party affiliations even if they have not earned their party's nomination. This system is only used in Jacksonville, Minneapolis, and Louisiana. It was not proven to increase voter participation. It tends to qualify extremist candidates for runoffs, ends fusion politics, and undermines the Campaign Finance Law.

This is a solution in search of a problem. I believe in party voters being able to nominate the candidates who reflect their views. We have an able and diverse City Council as a result of that process. If it ain't broke, don't fix it.

To increase voter participation, we should implement Election Day voter registration, extend voting days, and let permanent resident non-federal citizens participate in our municipal elections. These proposals did not make the ballot.

Joseph A. O'Hare, S.J. (Charter Revision Commission)

I decided to vote against putting on the ballot the recommendations for changes in city elections.

After considering the testimony from many citizens and groups over the past several months, I remain concerned about the possible unintended negative consequences of such a fundamental change. In particular, I am concerned about the possible damage done to third parties and fusion tickets; about the great irony that the elimination of party primaries could actually increase the power of party bosses by stripping away the right of party rank and file to vote in party primaries; and, most of all, about the dangers this fundamental change poses for New York City's Campaign Finance Program, dangers which the staff of the Commission may not understand and certainly do not appreciate.

While it is true that elected public officials and Democratic Party leaders were vehement in their opposition to this proposal, and it could be argued that they have a vested interest in the current system, it is also true that every good government group argued against this proposal.

The Association of the Bar of the City of New York

The Association of the Bar of the City of New York opposes the proposal to establish "nonpartisan" elections for City offices. There has been no showing that such a dramatic change will produce the benefits its proponents claim. While the proponents' main argument is that independent voters do not participate in party primaries, there is no evidence that independent voters' interests are being ignored (and they can register in a party if they choose), nor that nonpartisan elections would increase voter participation. City elections have been highly competitive; three of the last six mayors have been Republicans. Also, our political system, while not without fault, has shown a capacity for electoral reforms — such as public campaign financing and term limits — which have expanded electoral choice.

We are concerned about the impact of nonpartisan elections on the City's excellent campaign financing system. A shift to nonpartisan elections may have the unfortunate, anomalous result of allowing parties to spend far more on candidates than they can presently. Furthermore, nonpartisan elections would weaken political parties, affecting their important role in balancing various interests, vetting government decisions and forging the compromises which are important to City governance.

Brennan Center for Justice at NYU School of Law (Deborah Goldberg)

Every good government group that testified before the Charter Revision Commission opposed placing electoral change on the ballot. Our top reasons to vote “NO” on the ballot proposal on City elections are: (1) The Commission refused to do the careful study and analysis that should precede such a major change to the City's election system. The public now cannot assess the impact of the system on communities protected under the Voting Rights Act. (2) The proposed system is used in only two cities (Jacksonville, FL, and Minneapolis, MN) and Louisiana. In Louisiana, it allowed former KKK leader David Duke to become the Republican candidate for governor. Here, too, the proposed system may help extremist candidates. (3) The proposed system denies political parties the right to place endorsements on the ballot, while allowing candidates to list only their party membership. The change would hurt minor parties (such as the Conservative Party and Working Families Party), which are a vibrant part of New York's political system and provide useful information to voters. (4) The proposed system seriously threatens the City's successful and well-regarded campaign finance program, by separating candidates from their parties and opening a loophole for huge party expenditures.

Common Cause/NY (Rachel Leon, Executive Director)

Common Cause/NY joins the chorus of civic organizations in New York City urging a no vote on the proposal to prohibit New Yorkers from voting in political party primaries. This change, which would be a dramatic shift for city voters, has been rushed to the polls by an undemocratic charter revision commission whose Chair stated his intention to put this question on the ballot before holding a single meeting.

There has not been enough vigorous public debate on the impact of such a fundamental change or of the serious unintended consequences that may result.

First, there is a fear that non-partisan elections could open the door to unregulated soft money spending by political parties that would no longer be constrained by the provisions of state law or city rules. As an organization that has fought the abuses of soft money spending, we share a deep concern that this proposal could exacerbate this problem.

Second, voting rights groups have raised questions that ending party primaries could lower voter turnout, decrease information to voters, and advantage wealthy candidates, making elections more about name recognition than issues. For more information on the proposal, please visit www.commoncause.org

Bill de Blasio (City Council Member)

This proposal calls for the elimination of party primaries. Eliminating party primaries from city elections would be a step in the wrong direction.

New York City has already made historic changes to its election system with the adoption of term limits and the best municipal campaign finance program in the country. These reforms have opened up our election system and made it possible for hundreds of candidates to run for public office. In 2001, there were approximately 250 candidates who ran for office. In my primary race alone I faced five other challengers. Throughout the city we saw dynamic and competitive campaigns that energized voters and brought more New Yorkers into the political process.

Whatever is wrong with our politics will not be fixed by eliminating party primaries.

This is especially true given that the elimination of party primaries could undermine everything we've achieved up to now as a result of the city's landmark campaign finance program. The elimination of party primaries would favor millionaires and billionaires who run for office by enhancing the role money and special interests play in elections. Why change the system to favor the wealthy?

David Dinkins (Former Mayor)

Party primaries and strong campaign finance guidelines have helped to produce a representative government, one that includes the City's first African American Comptroller, a Latino President of the Borough of The Bronx, two African American women as Presidents of the Boroughs of Manhattan and Queens, and a City Council that seats 25 people of color among its 51 members — including the first Asian American elected City official.

We can, and we will, achieve even greater diversity in the years to come, but eliminating party primaries is not a step in that direction. It would, instead, be a step backward.

Eric Gioia (City Council Member)

This referendum will actually magnify the effect of big money in elections, turn voters away from the issues and towards candidates' ethnicities, and even increase the power of political parties.

Today, ballots list candidates' party affiliation. By eliminating primaries, there could be a long list of candidates to choose from, like the California fiasco, and with no requirement to list party affiliation, voters may rely more on the kind of last name candidates have rather than the issues they stand for.

In addition, parties can't spend money in primaries, but under the proposed system, nothing would prevent a party from spending on one candidate, giving him or her a huge advantage — and giving voters even less choice in choosing what candidates they want on the ballot.

Lastly, right now, you can't spend your way onto the ballot — you have to be affiliated with a party. But with "non-partisan" elections, if you spend enough, you're virtually assured a place on the ballot.

Non-partisan elections are a step backwards for New York City.

Betsy Gotbaum (Public Advocate)

Party primaries play a vital role in our electoral system. Primaries allow for citizens to engage with important civic issues early in the political process, and ensure that candidates develop policy platforms that matter to voters.

Doing away with party primaries would diminish the role of ideas, ideals, and ideology in campaigning. Instead, campaigns would focus on promotional advertisements that lack substance. This would give an unfair advantage to wealthy candidates, who would be able to outspend their competitors and raise their visibility among voters, regardless of their past experience and work in serving the public or the public good.

I know how difficult it is for a woman to get elected to city-wide office. The elimination of primaries would jeopardize the very diversity that we have achieved, making it more difficult for women and people of color to get elected.

Without the political engagement and selection process afforded by primaries, voters would be more confused when faced with potentially dozens of candidates (as now in California). This could have a devastating effect on voter turnout.

A. Gifford Miller (Speaker, City Council)

The proposal to eliminate party primaries alters dramatically the manner in which you elect representatives. Political parties, be they Democrat, Republican, Working Families, Independent, or other, serve a vital function. Without party labels, you will not be able to identify a candidate's beliefs, which is extremely dangerous. There will be confusion, manipulation and undue influence by wealthy candidates and candidates with hidden and extremist views.

The elimination of primaries may also violate the federal voting rights act. Party primary elections are one place that minority combined votes can have an impact, and help overcome electoral obstacles. Thus, the proposal may dilute the voting strengths of people of color.

With regard to so-called procurement reforms and agency reorganization, a few may be arguably of merit, but others are confused, ill thought and ill prepared. Eliminating the Preliminary Management Report would remove an important tool for monitoring agency spending. The Commission was the wrong place for these recommendations since the proposed changes could be accomplished by local law after public hearings and testimony. This is how laws are passed and enacted — thoughtfully and with due deliberation.

Douglas Muzzio (Professor, Baruch College, CUNY)

The proposed election system is a rarely used and never studied hybrid: a two stage election with the first round open to all candidates irrespective of party affiliation and a general election with the top two vote getters. The commission studied none of the 10 cities with such runoffs and only one of the three cities (and Louisiana) which allow party affiliation on both ballots. Worse, the commission did not examine this system as it might interact with New York's unique demography, geography, and politics, particularly the synergistic effects with term limits and campaign finance.

Among the questions unaddressed, let alone unanswered are: What's the politics and governance that result from such a system? What replaces parties? How will government improve? Will services get better?

Commissioners O'Hare and Lynch, in their dissents, pointed to unintended negative consequences, noting the dangers posed to the campaign finance law, the possible perverse strengthening of party leaders, and the fostering of extremist candidacies.

These consequences will result from the failure of the commission to produce objective, rigorous, methodologically sound analyses. The commission's reports are replete with omissions, errors in logic and fact, questionable assumptions, and unsupported projections.

New York Public Interest Research Group (Gene Russianoff)

This proposal would be a dangerous risk for the city, greatly changing our voting rights in ways no one can now fairly predict. That's because the Commission didn't do its homework. Opponents raised serious questions, including whether killing party primaries would lower voter turnout, advantage wealthy candidates, and make elections less about issues and more about celebrity. But the Commission didn't fully address these issues, instead racing to get on the ballot.

It would undermine the city’s campaign finance law, which is designed to reduce the influence of special interests. That’s because party spending in a party primary is now constrained by state law and city rules, but would not under the proposal.

It is the product of a bad process. The commission had a closed mind. Its chairman announced the outcome in advance and top staff served simultaneously in jobs on the payroll of Mayor Bloomberg, the proposal’s chief proponent.

It is opposed by the city’s leading non-partisan civic groups. For more information on the proposal, go to www.nypirg.org.

New York State Democratic Committee

Party Primaries Empower Voters — This proposal would eliminate Democratic primary elections entirely and would deny 2.7 million Democrats a collective voice in city elections. Party primaries have long been our way of ensuring voters get to choose their own party’s candidates. The elimination of party primaries would take power away from voters and return it to “party bosses.”

Negative Consequences of New System — The elimination of party primaries would likely: favor millionaires and billionaires running for office; undermine the city’s landmark campaign finance program, which has helped hundreds of candidates, including minorities, women and immigrants, run for office; create confusion; undermine the political impact of minorities; benefit extremist candidates; deprive voters of information gained from cross-endorsements; and limit voters’ choices in November to two candidates who may be from the same party.

Tainted Process, Tainted Outcome — Mayor Bloomberg handpicked the Commission to put this proposal on the ballot. Before the full Commission was appointed or the public heard from, the Commission’s Chair said a proposal to eliminate party primaries would be put on the ballot. Despite inconclusive evidence on the impacts of eliminating party primaries, the Commission rubber stamped the Mayor’s proposal.

Charles B. Rangel (Congressman)

Political parties were developed based on core philosophical beliefs and principles. There are many political parties and persons eligible to vote may enroll in any of them or be unaffiliated. In a democracy, majority rules and 2.7 million Democrats should not be denied the opportunity to come together in a primary to choose their party’s nominee to run in the General Election. While there are changes that could improve our electoral process, this proposal is not one of them. Given the importance of money in seeking high public office, adopting this proposal will place the working class and people of color at a disadvantage while creating advantages and opportunities for those of great personal wealth. If adopted, this proposal will create confusion and provide elections similar to the “circus like” California recall election now taking place.

Stonewall Democratic Club NYC (Tom Smith, President)

Party primaries give the party members the say in who the nominee of their party is. The proposal will remove the very heart of the system that created reforms in this city for the poor, people of color and for the lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender communities. Under the proposed system, a smaller group of people, perhaps only party leaders, will designate their endorsements, increasing the influence of big money on an already burdened system, and destroying a well balanced public campaign finance system

The new proposal would dilute the voting strength of people of color and we believe is a clear violation of the Federal Voting Rights Act. If this passes we can look forward to the years of court battles it will take to reverse this ill thought plan.

Almost every good government group in New York is opposed to this proposal. Leaders of most of the major parties are against it. It is a rare moment in the history of this city that so many groups that never liked each other are speaking out against one bad piece of public policy.

Working Families Party (Dan Cantor, Chair)

The Mayor’s proposal is good for wealthy candidates who can buy their way into public life. It’s good for candidates who want to disguise what they stand for. But that doesn’t mean it’s good for the rest of us.

A “non-partisan” system is like TEAMS WITHOUT UNIFORMS. Imagine a football game with all players wearing identical jerseys. No team name, no number, no logo, just the player’s name. It would be hard to know who to root for.

Same goes for voting. When a party says “So-and-So is our candidate,” voters get a sense of what that candidate stands for. Few people have the time to research every candidate’s positions and qualifications. You need a signal. That’s what a party label and party primary are about.

When a candidate runs Republican-Conservative, that means one thing. When they run Democrat-Working Families, that means another. Voters can make up their own minds if they have good information, and this proposal — by wiping out this kind of major party/minor party “fusion” ticket — will make good information harder to come by.

We have both Giants and Jets fans in the WFP. And we like the fact that they wear different uniforms.

Question 4: City Purchasing

Official Text

This proposal would amend the City Charter to:

- remove from the Charter detailed requirements for specific purchasing methods;
- increase qualifications for City purchasing officials;
- provide for citywide coordination to enhance opportunities for small businesses and minority and women-owned businesses;
- reduce required procedures for security-related contracts;
- reduce impact on City contractors, including not-for-profit organizations, of delays in contracting and payment; and
- consolidate financial audit requirements for City contractors.

Shall this proposal be adopted?

Official Summary (prepared by the Charter Revision Commission)

Chapter 13 of the Charter establishes many of the rules by which the City may purchase (or procure) goods and services. The proposal would make changes to Chapter 13 and to several related sections.

Administrative flexibility — Currently, the Charter contains provisions governing a variety of purchasing methods. The proposal would delete a number of these provisions and would require the Procurement Policy Board (“PPB”) to issue rules on most of the deleted topics. In addition, the proposal would authorize the PPB to issue rules for all alternative purchasing methods.

Currently, the Charter generally requires that purchases of goods be made by the Department of Citywide Administrative Services (“DCAS”). This proposal would allow the commissioner of DCAS to delegate a specific purchase of a specific good to another agency, for direct purchase by that agency, provided that the DCAS commissioner could not make this delegation for goods to be generally used by City agencies.

Currently, the Charter authorizes the Mayor to designate DCAS to perform specified administrative functions for certain specified City agencies. This proposal would permit the Mayor to designate additional agencies for which DCAS could perform procurement services.

Currently, the Charter requires proposed contractors and subcontractors for contracts above a certain monetary value to submit reports on workplace employment issues. This proposal would eliminate Charter provisions governing the content and review of these employment reports, and would require the commissioner of the Department of Small Business Services (“DSBS”) to issue rules on these topics.

Qualifications for City purchasing officials — Currently, the Charter contains no provisions governing the training or qualifications of City purchasing officials. This proposal would require the PPB to issue rules setting forth training and professional standards for these purchasing officers, taking into account the volume and complexity of agency contracting activities.

Small businesses and minority and women-owned businesses — Currently, the Charter requires the Department of Small Business Services (“DSBS”) to take steps relating to the promotion of equal opportunities for minority and women-owned businesses. This proposal would require citywide agency coordination by the Mayor to enhance opportunities for vendors.

Security-related contracts — Currently, the Charter generally requires public notice and hearing of contracts for the purchase of goods and services. This proposal would provide an exception to this requirement where the Mayor determines that the notice or hearing would disclose sensitive information that, if made public, could be detrimental to the security of the City or its citizens.

Timeliness of contracting and payment — Currently, the Charter requires that the PPB issue rules for the prompt payment of vouchers, including rules for the payment of interest to vendors whose vouchers are not paid on time. This requirement would be modified to require uniform interest for all vendors. In addition, this proposal would require the PPB to issue rules: mandating timetables for the completion of purchasing steps and remedies for failure to meet such timetables; providing for expedited renewal or extension of existing human services contracts in certain circumstances; and requiring the development of annual contract plans by the City’s human services agencies. This proposal would also establish an annual mayoral procurement report, which would include not only procurement activity indicators (as currently required to be included in the Mayor’s management report) but also indicators on agency performance relative to the timeliness of agencies’ procurement actions.

Financial audits — Currently, the Charter does not provide for financial audits of vendors by agencies. This proposal would require the PPB to issue rules governing City agency requirements for annual financial audits of vendors, including rules providing for consolidated audits across multiple contracts held by vendors with one or multiple agencies.

VENDEX — Currently, the Charter does not contain any provisions regarding VENDEX, the City’s computerized vendor integrity data system, which was created pursuant to the City’s Administrative Code. This proposal would require the Mayor and Comptroller to jointly issue rules necessary to maintain the VENDEX system. The proposal would not limit the power of the Council to legislate with respect to the VENDEX system.

Effective Date — The proposal would generally take effect immediately after approval by the voters. However, the employment report and VENDEX provisions would take effect nine months after such approval.

Pro and Con Arguments (prepared by the Campaign Finance Board)

PRO: The proposed changes will streamline and simplify the City procurement process to improve the efficiency and efficacy of the City's contracting. The current procurement system is too inflexible. The Commission's proposals will offer an appropriate level of flexibility to the City in contracting for goods and services, while retaining the necessary integrity and accountability of the process.

CON: Many of the proposed changes are not the proper subject of a ballot proposal. Procurement matters are complicated and arcane. They should be considered by the experts, not the general public. It should be left to the City Council and the Mayor who have the power to effect these changes through legislation or administrative procedures, to do so. The proposed changes that by law must be presented to the voters shift too much power to the Mayor, and upset a careful system of checks and balances.

STATEMENTS FROM THE PUBLIC CITY PURCHASING — PRO

Helen Sears (City Council Member)

This seems like a logical proposal that will alleviate some of administrative strains of requirements for specific purchasing methods.

CITY PURCHASING — CON

Leroy Comrie (City Council Member)

I have long been a supporter of changes in city purchasing to enhance opportunities for minority and women owned businesses and to stop delays in contracting and payments. In fact, I have a bill that would compensate small vendors for delays in payments. But this is the issue — these very important changes belong before the City's legislature — the City Council — not as a single question on a ballot. In my opinion, the June 26th Staff Report of the Commission did not discuss these changes in detail.

Question 5: Government Administration

Official Text

This proposal would amend the City Charter to:

- authorize the Mayor to issue rules governing the professional conduct of administrative law judges and hearing officers in the City's administrative tribunals, require the coordination of such tribunals, and expand the authority of the administrative tribunal of the Department of Consumer Affairs to hear all matters within the agency's jurisdiction;

- enhance the enforcement authority of the Conflicts of Interest Board by allowing increased penalties for violations of the City's ethics laws;
- replace the current sixteen member Voter Assistance Commission with a seven member panel, which would include the Public Advocate; an appointee of the Council Speaker; and five appointees (one from each borough) of the Mayor, with Council advice and consent. The coordinator of voter assistance would be appointed by the Mayor, with Council advice and Consent, instead of by the Commission; and
- require annual publication only of the Mayor's Management Report. The Preliminary Mayor's Management Report would no longer be required.

Shall this proposal be adopted?

Official Summary (prepared by the Charter Revision Commission)

The proposal would make the following changes to the Charter in areas related to government administration and accountability.

The City's Administrative Justice System — Currently, Administrative Law Judges and Hearings Officers who preside over cases in the City's administrative tribunals are generally not subject to a uniform code of professional conduct. This proposal authorizes the Mayor to issue rules governing the professional conduct and training and development of the City's Administrative Law Judges and Hearing Officers.

In addition, these Administrative Law Judges and Hearing Officers currently conduct thousands of administrative hearings annually in a variety of specialized tribunals, many of which are housed at specific agencies. There is no centralized mechanism to coordinate the operational policies and management practices of these tribunals. The proposal would create the new position of Coordinator of Administrative Justice, in the Office of the Mayor, to coordinate such policies and practices.

Finally, the proposal would expand the authority of the Department of Consumer Affairs (DCA) to hear more cases in its own tribunal. Currently, DCA cannot adjudicate many of the violations it issues in that tribunal. Instead, DCA has to take legal action in the State Courts. The proposal would authorize the Department to: (1) conduct administrative hearings to adjudicate violations of any law within the Department's jurisdiction; and (2) impose civil penalties of up to $500 per violation (except to the extent that penalties are otherwise provided).

Penalties for Violations of the City's Ethics Laws — The City's ethics law, known as the Conflicts of Interest Law, is enforced by the Conflicts of Interest Board (COIB). The proposal raises the maximum penalty allowed from $10,000 to $25,000. COIB would continue to have discretion in determining the appropriate penalty. In addition, the proposal authorizes COIB to commence a civil forfeiture action to recover moneys from those who have profited from a violation of the law.

Voter Assistance Commission — The Voter Assistance Commission (VAC) facilitates voter registration. Currently, VAC is comprised of sixteen members: the Public Advocate, the Budget Director, the Corporation Counsel, the President of the Board of Education, the Chair of the Campaign Finance Board, the First Deputy or another Deputy Mayor; the Executive Director of the Board of Elections; six members of the public appointed by the Council and three appointed by the Mayor. The chair is elected by the members from the membership. Appointed members serve for a term of three years. On recommendation of the Mayor, VAC appoints the Coordinator of Voter Assistance.

The proposal reduces VAC from sixteen to seven members. Of the seven members, five (one from each borough) would be appointed by the Mayor with the advice and consent of the Council, one would be appointed by the Council Speaker in consultation with the Mayor, and the Public Advocate would also serve. One of the appointed members would be designated to serve as chair by the Mayor, in consultation with the Speaker of the Council. Appointed members would serve for four-year terms. The Coordinator of Voter Assistance would be appointed by the Mayor with the advice and consent of the Council.

The Preliminary Mayor's Management Report — The Preliminary Mayor's Management Report (PMMR) reports on the performance of City government in the first four months of each fiscal year. It is followed by a final Mayor's Management Report (MMR) that evaluates the full fiscal year. The proposal eliminates the requirement that the City produce a PMMR.

Effective Date — The proposal would generally take effect immediately after approval by the voters. However, the provisions concerning VAC would take effect on April 1, 2004, after such approval.

Pro and Con Arguments (prepared by the Campaign Finance Board)

PRO: The Commission's proposal to establish a coordinator for administrative hearings and a code of professional conduct for the City's administrative law judges and hearing officers will offer needed centralized coordination of the City's various tribunals and increase the professionalism of administrative hearings. This will result in better information sharing and budgeting, accountability, and management, as well as improving the hearings themselves.

PRO: The Commission's proposal on the Department of Consumer Affairs will afford businesses more rights and protections, and also enable the Department to enforce its laws more effectively and at reduced cost by permitting the Department to resolve more matters at these hearings, rather than in the courts.

PRO: The Commission's proposal on the City's ethics requirements will result in better enforcement and compliance with these important laws.

PRO: The Commission's proposal to restructure the Voter Assistance Commission will enable the Commission to overcome significant operational challenges, making it more effective and enhancing its ability to function independently of the Mayor.

PRO: The Commission's proposal to eliminate the Preliminary Mayor's Management Report will do away with a duplicative effort that has been superseded by alternative, more technologically advanced reporting mechanisms.

CON: The Commission's proposals on administrative hearings, the Department of Consumer Affairs, and the Preliminary Mayor's Management Report are technical and specific matters, and are not the proper subjects for a Charter Revision Commission. Rather, these types of changes should be considered through the ordinary legislative process by the City Council, and by administrative action by the Mayor.

CON: The Preliminary Mayor's Management Report is an effective tool for oversight of the City's management. It should not be eliminated.

STATEMENTS FROM THE PUBLIC GOVERNMENT ADMINISTRATION — PRO

George N. Spitz (Former Mayoral Candidate)

The proposal dealing with Government Administration is especially deserving of voter support, because it enhances the enforcement authority of the Conflicts of Interest Board by allowing increased penalties for violations of the City's ethics laws. A strong vote for this section sends a message that citizens of New York City desire clean government.

Jane Kalmus (Vice-Chairman of the Voter Assistance Commission)

The newly revised Voter Assistance Commission will now provide in a nonpartisan manner information and assistance to the citizens of the city on how to register and vote regardless of race, gender, income or education. We applaud the Charter Revision Commission for revising the structure of the Voter Assistance Commission.
