SANITARY BUREAU,
NEW YORK, January 12, 1877.

W. DE FORREST DAY, M. D., Sanitary Superintendent:

SIR: I have the honor to report that after a careful analysis of the deaths attributed to "malarial diseases" during the year 1876, I have arrived at the following results:

231 deaths from affections of this character were recorded during the year. All such cases were assigned to Sanitary Inspectors for investigation into the main object of ascertaining definitely, if possible, the locations where said diseases had originated. In order to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion in any instance, the Inspector was obliged to see personally, or communicate with the attending physician, and frequently also to make an inspection of the place where the death had occurred. Many physicians refused or neglected to afford any information on the subject. Quite a number of cases were excluded on account of uncertainty as to the actual cause of death—or as to its complication with a malarial element—96 cases, however, were fully investigated, and I now submit the information thus obtained. As regards locality, I have divided the city into three parts: First. The solidly built-up portion below Fifty-ninth street, and the Central Park, believed to be generally exempt from malaria. Second. That district, more or less malarious, extending from Fifty-ninth street to Harlem river. Third. The territory north of Harlem river, known as the "Annexed district," or Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth Wards—embracing a territory prolific of malaria in almost every direction.
