LAW DEPARTMENT.

SUPREME COURT.

SMITH ELY, Jr., Mayor of the City of New York, and others, } against
 ALLAN CAMPBELL, Commissioner of Public Works, and others. }

Special Term, August, 1879.

Motion to continue an injunction.

Elliot Sanford and J. S. Lawrence, for plaintiff; W. C. Whitney, Corporation Counsel, and Geo. P. Andrews, for defendants.

VAN VORST, J.—The principal matter to be decided upon this motion, which is one for the continuance of an injunction, is as to the right of the Superintendent of Markets to grant permits or licenses to persons to construct and maintain stands and booths upon the sidewalks of the streets adjacent to Washington Market. The papers before me show that several such stands occupy considerable portions of the sidewalk on the south side of Vesey street, both above and below Greenwich street; as also the sidewalk of Greenwich street, and are maintained by their occupants for the purpose of trade, under such permits from the Clerk or Superintendent of the Market.

These structures are obstructions on the sidewalk which it is the duty of the defendant, the Commissioner of Public Works, to remove, unless they are lawfully there.

It is claimed on the behalf of the plaintiffs, that under the municipal ordinance the Clerk of the Market may lawfully grant permits to persons so to use the sidewalks. Streets, which include the sidewalks are for the public at large.

The Legislature of the State, representing that public, has authority over all public ways and places. It may authorize acts to be done, or legalize obstructions upon them which would otherwise be deemed a nuisance.

The Legislature, instead of authorizing the act directly, may allow it to be authorized by the municipal authorities.

A building or other structure of a like nature erected upon a street, without the sanction of the Legislature, is a nuisance, and the local corporate authority of a place cannot give a valid permission thus to occupy streets without express power to this end, conferred on them by charter or statute.

Dillon on Municipal Corporations, § 518, 521, 316. and rights of the Corporation of New York, pages 403, 404, the learned author refers to the case of Allerton against Deleson, decided in the Supreme Court, in 1861, in regard to a stand near Washington Market, in which it was said: "The stall in question is in one of the public streets of the city. It is out of the power of the Corporation, can by the most solemn act of which it is capable to confer upon any one the legal right to it for a day."

And St. John vs. The Mayor, etc., of New York, 3 Bos., 484, holds that the municipal corporations, although authorized to have and keep such and so many markets, at such and so many places within its corporate limits, as shall from time to time be established by the Common Council, cannot erect nor allow markets to be erected and occupied in the public streets of the city.

State vs. Laulack, 34 N. Y. Eq., 201.

Any permanent or habitual obstruction of a street, without authority of law, may fairly be said to be a nuisance.

The public is entitled to the full and free use of all the territory embraced within the limits of a street or highway, in its full length and breadth, and every individual has a right to travel over any part of the same.

Wood on Nuisances, § 252.

It is scarcely necessary to add that these statements are qualified by the right in the Legislature alone to authorize obstructions permanent or continuing, and do not exclude such interruptions in the use of the street by the public as are necessitated by the erection and alteration of buildings fronting on the street, and the occupation of the same with materials for the purpose and other necessary and temporary occasions, every obstruction of a street or highway is not necessarily a nuisance or objectionable, but if unnecessarily continued, or without direct legal right, it becomes such.

King vs. The Mayor, etc., 55 Barb., 404.

Davis vs. The Mayor, etc., 14 N. Y., 506.

The latter case decides, in direct terms, that any unauthorized continued obstruction of a public highway or street is a public nuisance, Lawrence vs. The Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 2 Barb., 577. Reference is made by the learned counsel for the plaintiffs to the ancient charters of the city, as foundation of a right in the municipal legislature, thus to authorize the occupation of the streets in the vicinity of the markets.

An examination of these charters discloses no such right. But whatever there is in these charters inconsistent with or opposed to subsequent legislation on this subject must be considered as repealed. Laws of 1873, 335, section 119. It is also claimed that the municipal ordinances of 1866 confer such rights. But, as already observed, no municipal ordinance or regulation inconsistent with the law of the State can give such right. These ordinances, among other things, declare that it shall be the duty of the Clerks of the Markets to assign and set apart certain parts of the streets, at or near the said public markets, for the purpose of exposing for sale and selling garden produce, etc. Chap. 11, section 8. See also article 12, section 35. But these ordinances and regulations do not necessarily authorize the streets, or any part of them, to be occupied with stands or booths to be kept and continually maintained at all hours of the day.

The act to reorganize the local government of the City of New York, passed April 30, 1873, chapter 335, section 17, confers upon the municipal legislature the power to pass ordinances to regulate traffic and sales in the streets, highways, roads, and public places, and to regulate the use of sidewalks. Sub. 1 and 2.

But Sub. 4 also empowers the Aldermen to prevent encroachments upon and obstructions to the streets, etc., and to authorize and empower the Commissioner of Public Works to remove the same, but it adds these imperative words:

"They shall have no power to authorize the placing or continuing of any encroachments or obstructions upon any street or sidewalk, except the temporary occupation thereof, during the erection or repair of a building, on a lot opposite to the same." With this exception the Legislature has reserved to itself all power over the subject.

I regard this expression of the Legislature as clearly against any right in the municipal board or any of its officers or agents to authorize the occupation of the streets and sidewalks with obstruction, and encroachments of the character of those disclosed in this action.

If the ordinances of 1866 allowed such encroachments and erections, they were ultra vires, and in any event are rendered nugatory by the act of the Legislature above mentioned.

It is true that the ordinances "in force" in 1870, were revised and continued in force by section 119 of the Act of 1873, but in view of the express prohibition against the exercise of any power to authorize encroachment, and obstructions to the streets, except for the purposes mentioned, they cannot be interposed as a justification of the continuance of the obstructions and encroachments, through the stands and booths in question.

Section 70 of the Act of 1873 declares that "it shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Public Works to remove all obstructions now existing or which may hereafter be placed upon any street or sidewalk," and subdivision 8 of section 71 created in the "Department of Works" a bureau for the removal of incumbrances on the streets or sidewalks, the chief officer of which shall be called the Superintendent of Incumbrances, to whom all complaints shall be made, and by whom such incumbrances shall be removed." The papers show that complaint has been made to this Bureau in the Department of Works of the erections in question as obstructions. The sidewalks on many streets are not wide. Some of these stands are from six to eight feet in length, and occupy some two feet of the sidewalk, and extend over the curb and encroach upon the carriageway in some instances from two to four feet. Others are located on the corner of streets, interfering not only with travel on the sidewalks, but including the movement of vehicles. They occupy these positions at all hours of the day and are used for the vending of meats, poultry, and other articles. The above facts appear by the affidavits of the Superintendent of the Bureau in the Department of Works having oversight of incumbrances, and others as also complaints proceeding from store keepers on the streets. Ready access to those places of business is hindered, and from persons traveling over the sidewalks and carriageway, and others who are obstructed.

It is made the duty of the Commissioner of Works to remove these obstructions, and this notwithstanding the fact that he has not been requested by the Board of Aldermen to take such action. It is true, as appears above, that it is made a duty of the Board of Aldermen to order the removal of obstructions from the sidewalks and streets, but its omission to do so should not paralyze the action of the Commissioner. He has a duty independent of the Aldermen in this regard.

The Commissioners of the Sinking Fund claim that the removal of these stands and booths from the streets will deprive them of revenues which they are entitled to receive and apply to the payment of the city debt.

By chapter IX, article 1, sub. 8, of the ordinances of 1866, the proceeds "for market fees, and market rents" are pledged to the Sinking Fund.

The market fees and rents, properly so called, are not interfered with by the proposed action of the Commissioner of Public Works.

It cannot be said to be an impairment of these revenues if the sums which are sought to be collected for the use of the stands and booths on the public streets, which the municipality has no legal right to authorize, is cut off. The motion for the continuance of the injunction should be denied.
