Ida Relief - NYC

The City of New York is releasing two new resources to support the recovery of households impacted by Hurricane Ida.

A verified contractors list now exists to identify vetted licensed contractors agreeing to:

- Prioritize repair work to damaged homes
- Conduct home visits within 24 hours of contact
- Secure necessary permits within 24 hours of a contractual agreement
- Complete contracted work within three months

A supplemental funds program is established for homeowners who applied for FEMA benefits but did not receive enough funding to make their home habitable. In combination with FEMA benefits, this new program can provide up to $72,000. (See page four of the pamphlet below)

A pamphlet is available for more information and distribution to Ida impacted households.

Thanks to NYC VOAD for posting.

Mask Mandates and Key to NYC

COVID-19 Alert Levels in NYC

In a press release on March 5, Mayor Adams announced the suspension of the Key to NYC program and the removal of indoor mask mandates in city public schools for K-12 students.

All other COVID-19 mandates will remain in effect. Under the rules, employees will still be required to be vaccinated unless they have received a reasonable accommodation from their employer.

Additionally, Mayor Adams released a new color-coded system that tracks COVID-19 alerts and keeps New York City residents apprised of the risks they face in New York City. The alert system can be found on NYC Health's website.

Spotted Lanternfly

Did you know that all of NYC is in a protective zone because of the Spotted

Lantern Fly, aka SLF? Read more from the NYS Department of Conservation and follow NYC Parks for local events to find out how you can help manage this infestation.

While not considered a widespread threat to our city's forests, it is a significant threat to a wide range of agricultural crops including walnut, grapes, hops, apples, blueberries, and stone fruits. (photo Staten Island Advance/Jan Somma-Hammel)
