Deaths reported during the week ending August 18, 1877.

greater portion of sickness, of course, was found in the crowded tenements of the Fourth, Sixth, Seventh, Tenth, Eleventh, Thirteenth, Seventeenth, and Twenty-second Wards, a condition inseparable from this class of dwellings as at present occupied, for wherever there is density of population there is a proportionate amount of sickness, not only from the fact of there being large numbers of people within a given area, but overcrowding almost always implies poverty, want of proper food, neglect of clean-liness, increased amount of refuse, imperfect removal of excreta, and various other conditions, the effect of which is to poison the atmosphere and contribute largely to infant sickness and mortality. So long as it is necessary for the laboring man to reside with his family near the scene of his daily labors, this condition will continue, and not until there are some means of cheap and rapid transit by which he can remove those dependent upon him away from crowded portions of the city, while he goes to and from his daily work, will the sanitary condition of such neighborhoods be materially and permanently improved. permanently improved.

This system of house-to-house visitation is attended with many advantages to the poor. Depend-ing on the various dispensaries for medical relief, either delicacy or indifference frequently induces them to neglect sending for a physician until disease is too far advanced to admit of further delay; and when at last application is made for medical relief, it may be at a late hour, the dispensary per-haps closed for the day, and another night must pass before the services of a doctor can be obtained, the disease meanwhile making progress, and the chances of recovery lessening in proportion to the delay.

haps closed for the day, and another night must pass before the services of a doctor can be obtained, the disease meanwhile making progress, and the chances of recovery lessening in proportion to the delay. On the other hand, by visiting from house to house, many cases of sickness are found in their incipiency, and by judicious and timely treatment much suffering is prevented, and, doubtless, many lives saved. This is not only according to common sense theory, but it appears to be confirmed by our vital statistics during the included period; for during the week ending July 21, there were among children under five years of age, 285 deaths from diarrheeal diseases, since which time there has been a gradual diminution until the week ending August 18, when the reported mortality among the same class of children and from the same class of diseases was 168. The same results followed a similar effort last year, when it was hinted by some that it might have been a mere coinci-dence. That a second coincidence should attend a second effort without any relation of cause to effect, is, to say the least, hardly probable. It would be hardly just to close this report without acknowledging the co-operation of St. John's Guild in liberally supplying us with excursion tickets for distribution, and of several druggists who have volunteered to supply medicines either gratuitously or for the mere cost of the drugs. It is the united testimony of the Visiting Corps, who took pains to revisit the children sent on these excursions, that the results were almost without exception beneficial, and that the Guild is in this way doing a good work towards the relief of infant suffering. Among the druggists who kindly tendered their assistance are : I. M. Seltzer, 403 Hudson street ; Herman Denhoff, 108 Varick street ; Alexander & Company, 48 Third avenue ; Henry C. Hipe, 69 Rivington street ; George Dege, 283 Third avenue ; Charles B. Smith, 47 Cherry street ; Louis Stoff, 1180 Second avenue ; William Schultz, 145 Avenue A ; I. N. Keeler, 38

All of which is respectfully submitted, E. H. JANES, M. D., Assistant Sanitary Superintendent.

SANITARY BUREAU, August 21, 1877.

To Dr. W. DE F. DAY, Sanitary Superintendent :

70 Dr. W. DE F. DAV, Santtary Superintendent: SIR-I have respectfully to present the following report on the labors performed by the Corps of Visiting Physicians recently appointed for special duty, from July 18 to August 14, inclusive. The services of these gentlemen, forty-seven in number, consisted in visiting from house to house the poor of the city, particularly those residing in crowded tenements, with a view to the relief of children suffering from sickness, especially of a diarrheeal character. Each visitor was assigned to a district which he carefully canvassed, visiting each poor family in succession, imparting in every instance such advice as appeared necessary, distributing small tracts containing in the English and German languages plain directions concerning the cure and prevention of diarrheeal diseases of infancy, and treating such cases of sickness as fallfunder their observation and were without medical care. In the capacity of sanitary missionaries they visited during the above period, with the aid of five members of the Vaccinating Corps, 23,566 houses, 131,573 families, treated 4,719 cases of sickness, and distributed 5,128 excursion tickets for the Floating Hospital of St. John's Guild. As these appointments were not all made on the same day, the average number of days occupied in the service was twenty-seven, making an average of about ninety-four visits per day for each visitor.
