The 696 deaths represent a death-rate of 22.65 against 23.77 for the previous week, and 29.28 for the corresponding week of 1889. The mortality at the present time is the lowest for this season of the year since the organization of the Health Department, and has only been approached in 1884, which was remarkable for its low mortality, and then the death rate for the corresponding week (ending March 8) was 25.56.

The decrease of 34 deaths is mainly due to a decrease of 23 in constitutional diseases, of 7 from Bright's disease, of 8 from developmental diseases, and 7 from puerperal diseases. There was an increase of 7 in the deaths from diphtheria and of 21 from pneumonia.
