BOARD OF RAPID TRANSIT RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS.

Chief Engineer's Office, No. 320 Broadway, New York.

New York, March 12, 1903.

Hon. A. E. ORR, President, Rapid Transit Board:

Sir—On February 19 I laid before the Board a plan for extending the existing rapid transit facilities of the Boroughs of Manhattan and The Bronx, and for creating new facilities where there seemed to be greatest immediate demand, and at the same time explained to the Board that I would, within three weeks, submit another plan covering the Borough of Brooklyn, as the latter could be more intelligently treated if considered on its own merits. Such a plan I now beg leave to submit for your consideration. When the two plans and their accompanying reports are combined the instructions of the Board directing the Chief Engineer to prepare a comprehensive plan of rapid transit extension for the whole City of New York will have been complied with.

When the Rapid Transit Board was organized its jurisdiction extended over the City of New York, as it then existed, a territory now included within what is the Boroughs of Manhattan and The Bronx, and it was not until the limits of the City were extended so as to include the City of Brooklyn, Richmond County and a part of Queens County, that the Board had any power to deal with the last-named territories. It is for this reason that the work of the Board is found to be in a more advanced condition in Manhattan. As soon as possible after consolidation was effected the Board took up the question of extending the subway system across the East river, and pushed forward as rapidly as possible the work of preparing plans and securing the necessary consents. In due course a most advantageous contract was let, and such work is now actually in progress. When this second contract is completed the municipality will own a subway system extending from the Borough of The Bronx, passing the whole length of Manhattan to the intersection of Flatbush and Atlantic avenues in Brooklyn, with a total length of railway of 24.1 miles, over which passengers can ride in through cars for a uniform fare of five cents, and with both express and local service over the greater portion of the route.

Owing to the fact that until recently the municipalities of New York and Brooklyn were quite separate, there have been developed in the two cities two distinct systems of transportation facilities without any correlation, in each case as if the other city did not exist, and as if neither city had any relation with the other. In consequence we have the great network of railway lines of Brooklyn, consisting of 30 miles of elevated railway and 479 miles of surface railway (the latter expressed as single track) focused to one bridge with one pair of tracks for elevated trains and one pair of tracks for surface cars. These four tracks carry annually about 110,000,000 passengers, the greatest burden of traffic carried by any railway in the world. This extraordinary condition produces not only a congestion at the Manhattan terminus of the bridge that is a disgrace to municipal management and modern technical skill, but it also inflicts on the great majority of the passengers a tremendous burden of inconvenience in depositing them at a point considerably remote from their points of ultimate destination. However important a centre may be the City Hall, it is evident that only a small portion of the people coming from Brooklyn have their places of business in that immediate vicinity, the others being obliged to go by foot or vehicle to other points in the wholesale and financial districts extending from, say, Bowling Green to Grand street.

In considering any plan for the relief of Brooklyn—for however great is the need of relief from the present lack of transit facilities in Manhattan, similar relief for Brooklyn is quite as pressing—the question of congestion at the Manhattan terminus of the Brooklyn Bridge stands pre-eminent. The capacity of the bridge and the choking of the avenues leading to it in Brooklyn limit the capacity of all lines in Brooklyn. With increased capacity of outlet every elevated and surface track could immediately carry more trains or cars.

To afford such relief certain improvements are in hand, and some nearing completion. The subway system is already being extended as above explained; the Williamsburg Bridge is nearly finished, and the Manhattan Bridge is well begun. When these works are completed by the City, at a tremendous cost, the opportunities will be presented to materially improve the situation. In order that such improvement shall be thoroughly effective some plan must be devised to bring the new bridges into harmonious relation with the transportation facilities. Such a plan has not hitherto been devised.

Many plans have been proposed for improving the conditions existing on the Brooklyn Bridge, but no entirely satisfactory plan has ever been devised, for the reason that no plan has ever been proposed sufficiently drastic or comprehensive as to provide a definite solution. Every plan has included some makeshift alteration of the bridge. As originally designed, twenty-five years ago, the bridge was intended to carry one pair of tracks in the centre, on which trains were to be run to and fro across the bridge, with an estimated capacity of 30,000,000 passengers annually, a figure not realized for many years. After a time the inconvenience of changing cars at the Brooklyn end, and the burden of paying two fares, led the City authorities, very wisely, from the point of view of the public, to lease the bridge railway to the local railway company, thus permitting it to run its elevated railway trains direct to the Manhattan terminus, and to place tracks on the bridge roadways for the surface trolley cars. These roadways, wide enough for vehicular traffic, if given up wholly to that purpose as originally planned, are seriously overburdened with both cars and vehicles; as the former, being on fixed lines, necessarily impede, and are impeded by the latter. To obviate this last difficulty it has been proposed to reconstruct the bridge superstructure at a cost to the City of more than $2,000,000. The bridge is now carrying nearly four times as many railway passengers as the original utmost maximum estimated capacity, with a similarly increased vehicular traffic. It is simply impossible for the present structure to perform this service properly.

One plan that has been proposed for bridge relief took into account one of the great defects, namely, the congestion at the bridge end, to relieve which it was thought necessary to build distributing railways north and south. This was the plan recommended by Messrs. Prout, Boller and Whinnery. The railway extensions proposed were elevated, however, thus inviting hostile attack by abutting property owners; and they also failed to recognize the limitations of the bridge itself.

Inasmuch as the most important details in the solution of the Brooklyn problem are the utilization of the bridges and distribution instead of congestion in Manhattan, they should be given first place in the consideration of the question. As more people can be carried in train units than in car units the facilities for distributing people by the Brooklyn elevated trains should be developed as much as possible, and arrangements made to utilize both the Williamsburg and Manhattan bridges, the western termini of which, however, are too far away from the great commercial centres to be reached conveniently without special transportation lines. After a very careful study of the Brooklyn Bridge, and after studying all the plans already proposed and making many others, I am convinced that it should be restored to its original purpose and cease to be a factor in the handling of elevated trains. As it can only be made use of by some makeshift plan, it is better to face the problem with all its difficulties and create a new plan adapted to the requirements of to-day.

To this end I beg leave to propose the following:

In connection with the Brooklyn end of the Manhattan Bridge, the City authorities propose to construct a new thoroughfare along the axis of the bridge produced to the intersection of Fulton street and Flatbush avenue. Such a street intersects or reaches all the elevated lines now running to the Brooklyn Bridge. When the Manhattan Bridge is completed spurs from the elevated lines will be run over the bridge. The topography of the ground in Brooklyn is such that a connection can also be made with every elevated line so that it will run into a subway without serious interference with cross streets. Such a subway can be carried under Nassau and Orange streets and the East river to Maiden lane in Manhattan with a station near William street. From this station one line can run across the City via Cortlandt street to West street, and another line along William street, diagonally under the present bridge structure to Park Row, thence to Centre street, to Grand street, and then under private property to the end of the Williamsburg Bridge at Delancey street, where, with but little alteration in the bridge structure, the subway tracks can be connected with the elevated tracks on the bridge. This will provide a loop for the elevated railways of Brooklyn by way of the Williamsburg Bridge and this second Brooklyn tunnel. With this subway a similar connection can be made with the elevated tracks on the Manhattan Bridge when the latter is completed, thus providing a second loop. This subway should have two tracks everywhere, except along Centre street, where there should be four. Stations could be located at William street, Fulton street, Brooklyn Bridge, Worth street, Canal street and Grand street, and at Church street and West street on the Hudson river branch. As the delays due to cross-switching at the terminal would be done away with, more elevated trains and longer ones could be run through the tunnel than on the present bridge, and by providing the above-named stations, or others equally convenient, Brooklyn travelers would be delivered at six stations instead of at one, as at present, and be distributed along the whole length of the east side of the commercial district in through trains at a single fare (also at two stations on the west side). For such passengers as desire to go to points north of Delancey street one or other of the two lines connects with every transportation line in Manhattan. The gradients in the tunnel are distinctly less than those on the Brooklyn Bridge. This plan proposes circulation of movement between the two new bridges and the proposed tunnel.

When the elevated trains are removed from the Brooklyn Bridge the trolley cars can be transferred from the roadways to the original bridge tracks, and thus restore the roadways to the exclusive use of vehicles. Additional terminal loops for the trolley cars have been ordered for the Manhattan end of the bridge. When they are completed the terminal congestion will be greatly reduced, and when the cars themselves are freed from vehicle interference, a more rapid and better service in every way can be furnished by the railway company. The City also will be saved the expense of reconstructing the bridge superstructure. As an incident to this plan, but an incident of no small importance, it will be possible to remove the existing unsightly bridge head house and give a magnificent vista to the bridge tower from City Hall Park, an opportunity made possible because the old Hall of Records has been removed.

To complete the subway from Williamsburg Bridge to Maiden Lane will require about two years after the necessary consents are obtained and contracts let, and three years will be required to complete the East River Tunnel. It is hoped that the Williamsburg Bridge will be opened for traffic during the present year. Some temporary arrangement must therefore be made to utilize the opportunity for additional service thus offered. This can be done by extending the elevated tracks over the Second and Third Avenue Elevated lines along Delancey street to the Bowery, and thence along the contemplated continuation of Delancey street to Elm street, thus making a connection for transfer to both the East Side elevated lines and the subway, and bringing the terminus of the Brooklyn lines near the centre of commercial activity. A very much better temporary relief would be to avail, if possible, of a suggestion made in my report of February 19, wherein two additional tracks were proposed over the Second Avenue Division to City Hall. These tracks could be connected with the Williamsburg Bridge by a line only 1500 feet long, and a temporary connection could also be made with such new tracks at the Brooklyn Bridge. A continuous loop would thus be immediately realized. It is possible that such an arrangement could be made with the two companies if it were taken up by the Board in connection with the granting of the other extensions previously and herein recommended. This connection should continue only so long as would be required to complete the Centre street subway.

The whole of the tunnel and subway herein proposed from the Brooklyn approach to the Manhattan Bridge under the East river and connecting with the Manhattan termini of the Williamsburg and Manhattan Bridges, could be constructed under the conditions of municipal ownership, as provided in the Rapid Transit Act, and similar to those in force on the subway and tunnel now being built to Brooklyn.

Should the above-described plan be carried out, the Borough of Brooklyn will then be connected with the Borough of Manhattan by three bridges carrying six elevated tracks and ten surface tracks, and two tunnels carrying four tracks, every one of which tracks will have a greater carrying capacity than either one of the two elevated or two surface tracks on the existing bridge. These increased facilities of transfluvial transit will in themselves provide the greatest single measure of relief that Brooklyn stands in need of; there remains, therefore, but to propose and to carry into execution as rapidly as possible certain extensions of the rapid transit facilities in Brooklyn, which will be rendered possible by the increase in the terminal facilities in Manhattan. These extensions should obviously be of two characters—one, the extension of the subway system wherever such extensions can be made economically, and become an integral part of the railway system which the City has already begun; the other, extensions on such terms as the Board may determine of the elevated lines of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, in order that such Company may more properly fulfill its obligations. The first of these extensions will obviously require time; the second, however, can be more quickly executed, and consequently is the one to furnish immediate relief. Such extensions as seem to be most important are shown upon the map accompanying this report and can be described briefly as follows:

FIRST—SUBWAY SYSTEM.

This system now terminates according to Contract No. 2 at the intersection of Flatbush and Atlantic avenues, where a connection can be made by transfer or otherwise with the trains of the Long Island Railroad, and by means of the Atlantic avenue improvement, now in progress of construction jointly by the City and the Long Island Railroad, and so provide means of reaching the easterly limits of the Borough of Brooklyn. From the present terminus the subway system should be extended under Flatbush avenue with four tracks to the Prospect Park Plaza. Around the outer limits of the Plaza I propose a loop, and diverging from this loop a three-track line easterly along the Eastern Parkway to, say, East New York avenue. Two of the tracks on Flatbush avenue should be depressed at the Plaza, passing beneath the loop so as to avoid grade crossing, and then be carried southerly along Flatbush avenue to, say, East Broadway. These two lines would reach a portion of the Borough of Brooklyn not now served by any of the elevated lines of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, but a district second to no other in Brooklyn in desirability of improvement, and which in the near future, with proper facilities, will, beyond question, support a large population. The two termini that are proposed above are merely arbitrary, as reaching points beyond which the subway system could be carried in the near future when and as desired. In these directions, however, local development has not yet begun. It would seem unwise, therefore, to carry the system further than the points proposed until lines of development beyond will have been formed. The railway can then be extended more intelligently and more beneficially than can be done now, when, in the absence of definite development, only lines of a purely arbitrary character can be laid down. It is interesting to point out that these proposed subways, if constructed, will connect the great park systems of the City of New York, from Bronx, Pelham and Van Cortlandt Parks on the north, passing Central Park in the middle, and reaching Prospect Park on the south.

Another extension of the subway could begin at Flatbush and Atlantic avenues, running south along Fourth avenue to Fort Hamilton, probably becoming elevated at some point where the topography would allow.

When these lines are carried into execution and the traffic that they would produce has been developed, it is obvious that some further connection will be necessary in addition to the Whitehall-Joralemon street tunnel. It would seem that the best route for such a tunnel would be Atlantic avenue to Whitehall street. Such a tunnel would permit connections being made not only with the South Brooklyn line, but the east and southeastern Brooklyn lines, besides serving an already well populated district in Brooklyn. The Atlantic avenue line could be connected with the line that I have proposed to the Board running south along Church street, provided such line is constructed.

SECOND—BROOKLYN RAPID TRANSIT ELEVATED SYSTEM.

Studying the local details of this system one is impressed by the fact that it is without rapid transit facilities, as each one of the lines is a two-track structure only, and therefore incapable of furnishing an express service. The first thing that should be done should be to reinforce the main lines of travel with a third or a third and fourth track, so that the passengers who are living at a distance from the water front in either south or east Brooklyn can be carried to their destination without the inconvenience and loss of time of stopping at intermediate stations. Certain minor changes should be made in the system at a few points in order to facilitate the running of trains, and certain more important extensions should be made in order to reach the Williamsburg Bridge, and develop the facilities offered by that structure. In addition to this there are two important districts, one wholly in Brooklyn and one partly in Brooklyn and partly in Queens, not now served by rapid transit lines. It would be a comparatively easy matter for the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company to serve both of these districts and bring them both in touch, not only with the commercial district in Manhattan, but with the retail shopping district in the Borough of Brooklyn itself. These several extensions, additions and connections are shown upon an accompanying map, and are set forth in detail in the following table:

1st. Add a third track on the Fulton street elevated from the end of the line at East New York to the Brooklyn Bridge.

2d. Add a third and fourth track to the Broadway line, from the loop at East New York to the Williamsburg Bridge, and a third track from the loop to the terminus at Cypress Hills.

3d. Add a third track to the Myrtle avenue line from Ridgewood to the Brooklyn Bridge.

4th. Add a third track on the Fifth and Third avenue lines in South Brooklyn, from Myrtle avenue to Sixty-fifth street.

5th. Connect the Fulton street elevated, between Williams place and Alabama avenue and the Jamaica plank road. This will permit Jamaica trains to pass down either Fulton street or Broadway and avoid running through the loop with its consequent congestion.

6th. Connect the Fulton street line and the Fifth avenue line to provide for the latter a better terminal arrangement and to serve the local shopping district in Brooklyn.

7th. Construct a new elevated railway from the point where the Brighton Beach railroad connects with the Fulton street line, along Franklin avenue to Wallabout street, to Gwinnett street, to Lorimer street, to Manhattan avenue, to Vernon and Jackson avenues in Long Island City, to the Blackwell's Island Bridge, with an extension through Jackson avenue to Debevoise avenue, to Flushing Bay, and also a spur from Lorimer street to Montrose avenue, to South Fifth street, to the Williamsburg Bridge. This line will pass through an extensive portion of the Borough of Queens, and brings it in touch with the wholesale and financial districts in Manhattan, and the retail district in Brooklyn.

8th. Extend the Fulton street elevated from its terminus at Crescent street through Fulton street, Pitkin place, private property and Stewart avenue to the Jamaica plank road. This extension will give a direct connection to the district lying east of the terminus of the Fulton street elevated and west of Jamaica.

9th. The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company is now arranging by means of inclines to make a loop between the Third and Fifth avenue elevated lines to Fort Hamilton, which will very materially increase the facilities at that point. It is obvious that these facilities can be but temporary only, as these lines are on the surface, and the development of that district will, before long, prevent the continuance of running trains in this manner. Elevated structures therefore be authorized from Third avenue and Sixty-seventh street, through Third avenue to Clarke street, to Fifth avenue, and thence along Fifth avenue to Thirty-eighth street, thus completing the loop in question.

If the Board should approve these suggestions and should discuss with the railroad company terms under which such extensions can be authorized, I beg leave to call the attention of the Board to the fact that the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company now owns a line partly depressed and partly on the surface connecting with the Fulton street elevated and running to Brighton and Manhattan Beaches, known as the Brighton Beach Railroad. In many places this line runs on the surface and crosses streets at grade. Although such streets are not now actually in existence, nevertheless, on account of the development of this portion of Brooklyn, which is taking place so rapidly, steps should be begun to remove the danger of these grade crossings. I therefore beg leave to suggest to the Board that one of the terms made with the company should be an arrangement that all the grade crossings on this or any similar lines should be removed.

In this report no railway provisions have been proposed to connect the Borough of Richmond with the Borough of Manhattan. After a very careful study of the problem, I regret to report that the great expense involved is entirely out of proportion to the population to be served.

The total number of miles of new road proposed by this report is 37, and the total amount of new tracks proposed, whether in new road or as additions to existing roads, is 120 miles. An approximate cost of these improvements, exclusive of abutment damages, is about $52,000,000, of which about $31,000,000 represents the approximate estimated cost of extending the subway and of constructing the second tunnel with its Centre street connection in Manhattan. If the Board approves the suggestion that is contained in the report that the extensions of the subway and the new tunnel with its connections should be undertaken as municipal construction, the latter figure will represent the cost of so doing.

Respectfully submitted,

WM. BARCLAY PARSONS, Chief Engineer.

Fire Department Fund for fire alarm telegraph system..... 3 05

The Commissioner directed the promulgation of the following circular for the information of the uniformed force:

Headquarters Fire Department, Office of the Fire Commissioner,

January 15, 1903.

Circular No. 1.

A year ago, upon taking office, the Commissioner issued an order in which he assured the uniformed force—

That promotions would be made for merit only; that faithful service would be recognized; that transfers would be made only for the good of the service; that complaints would be heard, real wrongs redressed, and justice done.

To-day, at the beginning of another year, he recalls that order to their minds that the promise may be compared with its fulfillment. The Commissioner also deems it fitting at this time to speak briefly of the past twelvemonth and to outline what he thinks should be the aim of all members of the force during the coming year.

The highest efficiency in fighting fires is the ultimate object of the work of Commissioner, officers and men. To attain this in the best degree certain things are necessary. The Commissioner must have the confidence of the force. They must believe that he will deal squarely and impartially; that the Civil Service Laws will not be evaded; that each man will get what he has earned; that influence of any kind is unnecessary; that the welfare and happiness of the force in their daily lives, in the lengthening of the periods of relief from duty and in the condition of their apparatus houses, is his constant care; and, lastly, that he is honest and is actuated by a single motive: that of promoting the wellbeing of the force as he sees it.

The officers must exercise their great powers with the remembrance that they themselves rose from the ranks, and while preserving strict discipline must refrain from tyranny, abuse or favoritism. The firemen of the rank and file, being assured of these things, must give a willing service and must help, by obedience, to preserve the discipline which is necessary to their safety when in action and vital to the reputation of their respective companies and of the Department. Both have rights, and it is the duty of the Commissioner to see that they are equally maintained. Let officers and men alike remember that they should be friends, not enemies; that their interests are identical, not antagonistic; that each contributes to the reputation of the other and is essential to the other; that the road to advancement is open to all, and that among the men wearing blue shirts to-day are one or more of the men who will some day wear the badge of Chief of Department.

Upon entering the Department a year ago the Commissioner found that it was a matter of common rumor, if not of common knowledge, that certain conditions existed inimical to the welfare and tending to degrade the moral standards of the force. Among these conditions were the sale of promotions, evasions of the Civil Service Laws in the matter of selections from eligible lists, and the admission of applicants and the advancement through the various grades for reasons entirely distinct from demonstrated fitness or meritorious services. Out of these conditions had grown a widespread feeling of dissatisfaction, and jealousies and antagonisms had been engendered. The uniformed force was in danger of losing its high ideals. Why risk life when another who did not risk it gained the coveted honor? Why endure hardship and dreary routine when personal influence in the right quarter meant a pleasant detail and light work? Under these circumstances, that you continued to do your work as you did do it reflects the highest honor on the force as a whole and justifies its world-wide reputation.

These antagonisms have been nurtured and fomented by a newspaper that circulates in the Department. By ingenious misrepresentation it has tried to instill into your minds the belief that the Civil Service safeguards of your positions are destroyed, and that the friends of former officers are marked for attack and injury. These suggestions appear to have been dictated from personal motives and with an unfortunate disregard for the true interests of the Department. It is not necessary to characterize them further than to say that they are untrue in all respects. To believe them is to cultivate mistrust and fear without foundation. Friendship for a man is not a crime. Each will be judged by his own record, not by his loyalty to a friend. No one can throw down your legal safeguards but yourselves. Do your duty and you are safe. Fail to do it and you invite the inevitable result. An era of favoritism on the one hand and of tyranny and persecution on the other has existed here. It has passed away. Vindictiveness forms no part of the Commissioner's policy. No atmosphere of suspicion hangs about these headquarters. There is no man in the Department, high or low, towards whom he cherishes ill-feeling. To all equally his door is open for the hearings of wrongs or troubles, and each alike he will commend or blame as the conduct of each seems to deserve.

The Commissioner has in mind a number of projects for the benefit of the force. Prominent among these are a possible increase in the time off duty by an important addition to the number of men in a company, and the strengthening of the Pension Fund. To accomplish these and other helpful works the outlook must be forward, not backward. To accomplish them he needs the harmonious help of the entire force, and he believes that he will receive it.

Each bid or estimate shall contain the name and place of residence of the person making the same, the names of all persons interested with him therein, and, if no other person be so interested, it shall distinctly state that fact; also, that it is made without any connection with any other person making an estimate for the same purpose, and is in all respects fair and without collusion or fraud, and that no member of the Board of Aldermen, head of a department, chief of a bureau, deputy thereof, or clerk therein, or other officer of The City of New York is, shall be or become interested, directly or indirectly, as contracting party, partner, stockholder, surety or otherwise in or in the performance of the contract, or in the supplies, work or business to which it relates, or in any portion of the profits thereof. The bid or estimate must be verified by the oath, in writing, of the party or parties making the estimate that the several matters stated herein are in all respects true.

Each bid or estimate shall be accompanied by the consent, in writing, of two householders or freeholders in The City of New York, or of a guaranty or surety company duly authorized by law to act as surety, and shall contain the matters set forth in the blank forms mentioned below.

No bid or estimate will be considered unless as a condition precedent to the reception or consideration of any proposal, it be accompanied by a certified check upon one of the State or National banks of The City of New York, drawn to the order of the Comptroller, or money to the amount of five per centum of the amount of the bond required, as provided in section 420 of the Greater New York Charter.

The certified check or money, should not be inclosed in the envelope containing the bid or estimate, but should be either inclosed in a separate envelope addressed to the head of the Department, President or Board, or submitted personally upon the presentation of the bid or estimate.

No bid shall be accepted from or contract awarded to any person who is in arrears to The City of New York upon debt or contract, or who is a defaulter, as surety or otherwise, upon any obligation to the City.

The contracts must be bid for separately. The right is reserved in each case to reject all bids or estimates if it is deemed to be for the interest of the City so to do.

Bidders will write out the amount of their bids or estimates in addition to inserting the same in figures.

Bidders are requested to make their bids or estimates upon the blank forms prepared and furnished by the City, a copy of which, with the proper envelope in which to inclose the bid, together with a copy of the contract, including the specifications, in the form approved by the Corporation Counsel, can be obtained upon application therefor at the office of the Department in which the work is to be done. Plans and drawings of construction work may also be seen there.
