The Department orders—

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC CHARITIES AND CORRECTION.

DECEMBER 2, 1874.

At a meeting of the Commissioners of Charities and Correction the following resolution was presented by Commissioner Laimbeer:

Whereas, This Department have learned with deep regret of the death of the Hon. Wm. F. Havemeyer, Mayor of this city, whom to know was to love and regard with high consideration; the long life and successful business career of our esteemed friend is a history worthy of the attention of the young men of this day and generation (it was his delight to labor); and

Whereas, His interests in the welfare of our land and its institutions never varied—proud of his native city, full of thanks to a kind Providence for his preservation, with honest hope ever upon his lips for and in the interests of the people—he was suddenly called from duty; and

Whereas, We have ever maintained that William F. Havemeyer, always in every act as Mayor of this city, endeavored to perform his duty faithfully, honestly, and without regard to party interests or personal popularity, believing, as he would often say, "My reward will come in the future."

Resolved, That we look upon his death as a great loss to the city, because of his well-known integrity, his genial manner, and his honesty of purpose in all his public duties.

Resolved, That to the bereaved wife and children we extend our sincere condolence in this great affliction, and hope that the King of Kings, who does all things well, will make the meeting of the future one of joy to all.

Resolved, That in due respect to the memory of this good man, we close on the day of the funeral the offices of this Department, and attend the funeral service in a body (the offices to be draped).

Resolved, That these resolutions be placed upon the record of this Department in full, and a copy sent to the family of the deceased.

Unanimously adopted by the Board.

JOSHUA PHILLIPS,

EMMONS CLARK,
Secretary.

HEALTH DEPARTMENT OF THE
CITY OF NEW YORK,
BUREAU OF VITAL STATISTICS,
December 1, 1874.

To the Secretary of the Board of Health:

SIR—In the fourth week of November there were 521 deaths reported in this city. Precisely the same number were reported during the previous week, and after receiving all returns 548 were verified for the week. The classes and various causes of death and the number by each cause presented slight differences in these two weeks, except that there was an increase of mortality from bronchitis and pneumonia, and diseases of the brain and nervous system, and from causes certified as Bright's disease; while there was a considerable decrease of infant mortality; the latter decrease (in children under 5) was equal to the total decrease in all ages.

The number and causes of sudden deaths of persons in advanced life, even among the most favored classes, during the cold prelude of winter for ten days past, show how readily the silver cord of life is loosed in persons past 70 years of age.

There were 83 deaths in this class of persons during the last two weeks of November. The city, in mourning for the sudden death of its Mayor, testifies the importance of inevitable causes which at last strike down the most vigorous and well-preserved lives.

The death rate in the third week of November was equal to 27.40 in the 1,000 inhabitants yearly. The rate in twenty-one cities of Great Britain the first week in November was equal to 25 per 1,000. It was equal to 22 per 1,000 in London, Bristol, and Edinburgh; 36 in Glasgow, 35 in Liverpool.

While scarlatina, small-pox, and enteric fever are scourging numerous cities in England, diphtheria is now prevailing in about half the cities with which this Bureau holds correspondence in the United States, and it is more fatal in numerous interior towns and cities than it is in this city, where its increase seems to be stayed. No other infectious malady more imperatively demands the best resources of medical and sanitary knowledge to limit its prevalence and save life. Sanitary precautions have supreme importance in this disease.

Respectfully submitted.

ELISHA HARRIS, M.D.,
Registrar of Vital Statistics.

HEALTH DEPARTMENT OF THE
CITY OF NEW YORK,
NEW YORK, December 1, 1874.

The Sanitary Committee respectfully submit the following propositions concerning diphtheria which, embody deductions from the investigations of the latest and most competent medical authorities:

MODE OF ATTACK.

Diphtheria is caused by the inoculation of the air-passages with the diphtheritic poison, which, from this point infects the whole system; the local inflammation is attended with the formation of membrane (exudation); the fever and general symptoms are the result of this local infection.

HOW IT SPREADS.

Diphtheria is therefore a contagious disease (not perhaps as marked as scarlet fever) induced by contact with objects and persons infected. It may be diffused by the exhalation of the sick and the air surrounding them, or directly by the exudation, as in the act of kissing, coughing, spitting, sneezing, or by the infected articles used, as towels, napkins, handkerchiefs, etc.; the poison clings with great tenacity to certain places, rooms, and houses, where it may occasion cases after the elapse of months.

SYMPTOMS.

In ordinary attacks the poison begins to act the moment it lodges upon the tissues, but, like a vaccination, causes but slight sensible effects in from two to five days; then is marked prostration, dryness of throat, and pricking pain in swallowing; the throat becomes red, and patches of white exudation appear; and the glands of the neck swell. In mild cases these symptoms subside on the third or fourth day from their appearances; if more severe, these symptoms may be prolonged; if unfavorable, the fever increases, the local inflammation spreads, and exhaustion rapidly follows.

PREDISPOSING CONDITIONS.

The Person.—Diphtheria attacks by preference children between the ages of one and ten years, the greatest mortality being in the second, third, and fourth year; children of feeble constitution, and those weakened by previous sickness; and those suffering from catarrh, croup, and other forms of throat affections.

Social Relations.—All classes are liable to diphtheria where it is prevailing, but those suffer most severely who live on low, wet grounds; in houses with imperfect drains or surrounded by offensive matters, as privies, decaying animal and vegetable refuse; in damp rooms, as cellars; in overcrowded and unventilated apartments.

Seasons.—Diphtheria is not affected by either heat or cold, drought or rain.

PRECAUTIONS.

(a). The Dwelling or Apartment.—Cleanliness in and around the dwelling, and pure air in living and sleeping rooms, are of the utmost importance wherever any contagious disease is prevailing, as cleanliness tends both to prevent and mitigate it. Every kind and source of filth around and in the house should be thoroughly removed; cellars and fowl a reas should be cleaned and disinfected; drains should be put in perfect repair; dirty walls and ceilings should be lime-washed, and every occupied room should be thoroughly ventilated. Apartments which have been occupied by persons sick with diphtheria should be cleansed with disinfectants, ceilings lime-washed, and woodwork painted, the carpets, bed-clothing, upholstered furniture, etc. exposed many days to fresh air and the sunlight (all articles which may be boiled or subjected to high degrees of heat should be thus disinfected); such rooms should be exposed to currents of fresh air for at least one week before reoccupation.

WELL CHILDREN.

(b). When Diphtheria is Prevailing.—No child should be allowed to kiss strange children nor those suffering from sore throat; (the disgusting custom of compelling children to kiss every visitor is a well-contrived method of propagating other grave diseases than diphtheria); nor should it sleep with, nor be confined to rooms occupied by, or use articles, as toys, taken in the mouth, handkerchiefs, etc., belonging to children having sore throat, croup, or catarrh. If the weather is cold, the child should be warmly clad with flannels.

(c). When Diphtheria is in the House or in the Family.—The well children should be scrupulously kept apart from the sick in dry, well-aired rooms; and every possible source of infection through the air, by personal contact with the sick, and by articles used about them or in their rooms, should be rigidly guarded. Every attack of sore throat, cough, and catarrh should be at once attended to; the feeble should have invigorating food and treatment.

(d). Sick Children.—The sick should be rigidly isolated in well-aired (the air being entirely changed at least hourly), unlighted rooms, the outflow of air being, as far as possible, through the external windows by depressing the upper and elevating the lower sash, or a chimney heated by a fire in an open fire-place; all discharges from the mouth and nose should be received into vessels containing disinfectants, as solutions of carbolic acid on sulphate of zinc; or upon cloth, which are immediately burned; or if not burned, thoroughly boiled, or placed under a disinfecting fluid.

Respectfully submitted.

STEPHEN SMITH,
Chairman.
